BERGMAN-GOLDMAN

(Written for The Herald by Rev. C. R. Lowe.)

It has been my idea for a long time to liken Emma Goldman and her running mate Bergman to a boll or a festering sore. They have been in this country so long preaching their infamous doctrines longer than some of us can remember. At last it has come to the place where they have been ejected. This is surely a good thing for the country, and should have been done years ago, but the people of the country were not very much wrought up over them and what they were trying to do. But as the continual dropping weareth away the hardest rock, so their soap-box oratory and their papers have finally accomplished something which has awakened the people to the danger of the situation. They are foreigners though they have become American citizens, and they are agitators of the worst sort. There were but a few of their kind twenty-five years ago, and now there are nearly 150 papers and over 100,000 followers.

It is not so much that they did a lot of talking, but it was what they talked. It was not so much that they tried to influence the trend of our government, but that they were trying to destroy it altogether. Any one has a right to agitate a change of policy, but the country has set its foot on the idea that a man has a right to destroy, not "the government," but government in general, and this is what they advocated. We allow a man the right to freedom of speech, but we specify by our sentiments if not by the constitution, that it must be the speech of freedom, and that freedom is not anarchy. We submit that Lenin is a greater tyrant than Czar Nicholas. And why should the country confine its efforts only to the foreigner who is a dangerous agitator? It would not be possible to deport natives, but they need not be let loose to work havoc and destruction. We have places where such can be kept from doing harm. It is not our desire to abridge any man's rights to say what he pleases so long as he does not injure the name or happiness of another, but he must be responsible for what he says, and when he is a menace to the social organization for peace and order and industry, there ought to be a way to make him stop further damage.

The trend of our government is to become stronger. It used to be the idea, "the less government the better," but we have come to the time when the government takes a hand in the settling of disputes, is an investigator and adjuster of difficulties of various sorts; it takes over the coal and says who shall have it to burn, regulates shipping, prices of some commodities at times, tells a corporation what business they may engage in, and a lot of other things. And we are beginning to look more and more to the government for protection even against old H. C. of L. So we can see how serious it is becoming when a man will seek to tear down the whole social system or even a part of it. If a man has the toothache he lies him to the dentist and has it fixed or out, but when there is a disturber of the peace and quiet in the country we have to suffer it. The sailing of the "Red Ship" is a step in the right direction. Attorney General Palmer has asked for laws under which the judiciary department can handle such cases, and the people generally are willing to concede them. It is to be hoped that the deportation will be a good object lesson to dangerous agitators, both here and to those abroad who think of coming here. We fail to see the difference between our social system being stuck in the back and an individual getting the knife from the rear. We are glad Bergman and Goldman and the rest of the 400 are gone, and there ought to be some more "Red Ships" and if what we read is true.

THE NEW YEAR.

"Snow-decked and holly-decked it comes, To richest and poorest homes. Twelve jeweled months all set with days Of priceless opportunities. A silver moon, a golden sun, With diamond stars when day is done. Over all a sapphire sky Where pearly clouds go floating by."

Meats may be as successfully canned as fruits or vegetables by careful work. These will keep indefinitely and will be as fresh meat when opened. It is necessary that the meat be perfectly fresh. No amount of sterilization will make putrefied meat wholesome. The jars should be thoroughly sterilized and left in boiling water until they are to be filled. It is absolutely necessary to use new rubbers of the best quality.

WASHING WOOLENS.

Strong soap should never be used in washing woolens, nor should soap be applied directly to the garment. It should be used in solution. The water used in washing the flannels should not be more than luke warm, for at a luke warm temperature, soap and water have a less detrimental action on wool than at any other temperature. It is, however, more important to have all the waters used of the same temperature, because sudden changes in temperature causes shrinkage. The garment should not be rubbed, if possible to be avoided, but should be washed by drawing through the hand and washing up and down. Rinse free of soap in waters of the same temperature and wring through a loosely set wringer. Dry in a warm place but not near a fire as heat will cause shrinkage. When drying shape by pulling and stretching. If flannels are to be pressed they should first be allowed to dry and then should be covered with a slightly dampened piece of cheese cloth and ironed with a moderately hot iron. Blankets are washed in the same way.

Tuberculosis in Live Stock

"Tuberculosis in Live Stock, Detection, Control and Eradication," is the name of United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin 1069, which may be obtained by writing the College of Agriculture, Lincoln. This bulletin is especially timely and valuable just now on account of the Nebraska law effective January 1 which requires dairy cows to be tested for tuberculosis. The bulletin discusses the prevalence of the disease, how it is spread, causes, how to detect it, the tuberculin test, methods of eradication, etc.

MORGENTHAU PLEADS FOR HELPING HAND IN THE NEAR EAST

Former Ambassador to Turkey Says America Should Not Let Armenian Allies Starve.

By HENRY MORGENTHAU, Former Ambassador to Turkey and Leader in Near East Relief.

If they were good enough to fight and die for us when we needed their help so sorely, they are good enough now to share some meager little crumbs from our plenty when they have nothing, when hundreds of thousands of them are homeless, unclad, foodless and threatened with extermination by their enemies and our own.

Not far from a million Christians have been murdered by their Turkish oppressors. Hungry, terror stricken hundreds of thousands of refugees now look to the United States for succor.

the American people. They look to us as the human agency to extricate them from the frightful situation in which they have been left as a consequence of the war.

If we should fail to aid them, starvation and the winter's cold would go far to completing the work done by the unspeakable Turk.

I have not seen with my own eyes the misery in which the Armenians now exist. I have been spared that. But the reports which have been brought in by agents of the Near East Relief and by representatives of the Peace Conference paint a picture of wretchedness inconceivable to those who have not a first hand impression of the savagery of the Mussulman.

Expelled From Homes.

Since the beginning of the war the Turkish Armenians have been largely refugees from their homes. A simple agricultural people, they have been exiles from their farms, deprived of all opportunity to support themselves. Year by year their sufferings have increased. Now, a year after fighting has ceased, they are still living the life of nomads, able to continue to keep alive only by virtue of American philanthropy.

These homeless people—"Althy infidels" to the Turk—were good enough to exert their poor might in our behalf while the war was still in the balance. Massacres of a half century had not so broken their spirit that they dared not fight for right and for democracy when justice was the issue. We accepted their aid then. Surely we shall not pass them by without compassion now.

The day has passed when any self respecting man dares permit absorption in his own personal affairs to exclude consideration of his neighbor's well being. No honorable man can knowingly allow his neighbor to hunger or to go unclad. The Christian peoples of the Near East are our neighbors. The money needed to relieve them can be spared without causing any man, woman or child in the United States to suffer.

Must Not Rest on Past.
In other years of our own free will we sent missionaries to Turkey. Our schools and colleges and hospitals have played a wonderful role in humanizing that dark spot in the world. Our ideas, our educational resources, our material equipment, have been leaven in the Near East. Because we have done well in times past we have this great opportunity for the present.

The Armenians have been treated as perhaps no people in history have been treated because they are the spiritual brothers of western races.

Will America help them? There can be but one answer. Their necessity is dire, but our power is great. We are wealthy. We are a member of the family of nations. Our brothers call us. Food, clothes, money, are immediately wanted. If ever unassisted suffering called for succor the plight of the Armenians should be heeded now. A few months more and it may be relief will be too late for those myriads whom only we can save. We shall not fail them.

Calves Profitable For Boys and Girls

Webster county Boys and Girls Club members recently held a show and sale. Twenty-five head of shorthorns were sold for an average of $336.40 each and five herefords for an average of $370 each. One girl sold a calf for $1,150. Several hundred dollars in prizes were awarded. A. C. Shallenberger judging the show. The juniors purchased the shorthorns six months ago for an average of $150 each and the herefords for $200 each. In addition to the experience and knowledge acquired, the boys and girls made a good sum of money both in profits and in prizes.
