Farm Light Plants Need Care

Proper wiring is one of the important features of a successful farm lighting plant, says Nebraska College of Agriculture engineers. Poor wiring means danger from fire and may mean poor results from the plant itself. Regardless of voltage, the best wiring is none too good. Unless the plant is properly installed, the wiring well done, the wires of ample size, and due attention given the machinery after installation, satisfactory results can hardly be expected. No machine was ever made that did not require more or less attention. Farm light plants require care in installation and care in operation. When this care is given they usually return satisfactory results.

Much Cholera Among Poultry

The stream of letters reaching the Nebraska College of Agriculture indicates that cholera in poultry is nearing the epidemic stage. Suggestions in the matter of hygiene and sanitation are about all the poultry specialists have to offer. In fact they say that the best time to deal with any communicable disease is when it is about to enter the gate. Little success has been attained in treating sick fowls. The best method is to kill the bird as soon as it shows signs of serious illness and examine its condition after death. Everything possible should be done to safeguard the flock from disease. Where the chicken house is crowded it should be cleaned every day. If there is plenty of room one or two cleanings a week will do. Care in selecting food and water will do much to preserve the health of the flock. Especially is it advisable to avoid over-feeding. A constant supply of fresh water before the chickens is an important item. Prevention, rather than cure, is the secret of success in the control of poultry disease.

Brushy Bend School Closes With Picnic.

Last Saturday the Brushy Bend high school closed a successful term by having a picnic in Morgan's timber.

Although the day was rather unfavorable for an outdoor gathering, a large crowd attended, there being a few visitors besides the children of the district, and their parents.

After playing baseball and other games in the morning, a dinner of the regular picnic variety, including plenty of ice cream, was disposed of.

After dinner Mr. Austin, the teacher of the upper room, was presented with a fine thermos bottle, and Miss Anna Austin, the primary teacher, was presented with a gold pencil, Donald Ebel making a very appropriate presentation speech. This makes the third term taught by these two teachers in the Brushy Bend high school, they teaching the first term of the school after it was made into a two-room ten grade high school.

2ND MISSION COMES FROM PHILIPPINES

Body Headed by Senate President Quezon Reiterates Demand for Independence.

That the Filipino people are in earnest in their demand for immediate independence is indicated by the coming to the United States of a second Philippine mission to work for independence. Coincident with this announcement the War Department received a cable from Manila stating that the all-Filipino legislature had adopted resolutions reiterating its plea for immediate independence.

The second mission, like the first, is composed of the leading men of the islands and will work in the United States not only for immediate independence, but also to bring about "better understanding, greater confidence and closer economic relations between the United States and the Philippines."

The mission is again headed by Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, who is well known in America, having been for six years resident commissioner to the United States.

Senate President Manuel L. Quezon.

States. Mr. Quezon and the Hon. Sergio Osmena, Speaker of the Philippine House of Representatives and Vice President of the Council of State, are the leaders of the Nacionalista party, which has been in power since 1907.

White Speaker Osmena is not so well known in the United States as Quezon, he is considered one of the ablest men in the islands. Senate President Quezon recently referred to Osmena as "the greatest Filipino since Rizal."

The personal relations between Osmena and Quezon are probably without a parallel in modern politics. They have been the leading political figures in the islands for 12 years, yet there has never been the slightest indication of rivalry between them. Throughout their college life as well as their long political service each has refused to be a candidate for any position that the other aspired to.

During the years Quezon was the Philippine delegate in the American Congress he won the esteem and confidence of both the Republican and Democratic sides of the chamber. Whenever he spoke he was assured of a good attendance. One of the official short hand reporters once declared Quezon used the "purest English of any member of the House."

Osmena, as president of the Nacionalista party, is the leader of the national movement for independence. "Osmena is the premier 'de facto' of the Philippines," said a leading Filipino no journalist, now in America "A very conscientious and tireless worker, thorough and persistent, a genius for grasping the big features as well as the smallest details of public affairs, cool headed, quiet by temperament and education, a deep thinker, an eloquent speaker, a polished writer, a keen observer of men—such is Osmena."

Both Osmena and Quezon have been consistent advocates of Philippine independence, yet when the occasion demanded it they have never hesitated to champion the cause of America's good intentions toward the Filipino people.
