The Norfolk Press, published by W. H. and Marie Weekes, has finally landed kerplunk, with all four feet in the ranks of the non-partisan league, and Mrs. Weekes has tossed her millinery into the congressional ring. While her candidacy will make it troublesome for the candidates of the two old parties there is little chance of her election. Mrs. Weekes is talented and capable, has progressive ideas of government and is one of the politically-minded spirits of the reforming type. Corrections of evils in government must come through education and enlightenment. Once an enlightened intelligence is established, the course of politics will change to correspond with it, no matter what party or administration is in power. The third party, of which she now becomes a part, seems a cumbersome and expensive mechanism for doing an educational work that might be done far more cheaply and effectively in another way. But her teachings have not been heeded by the democrats of the Third District, hence her desertion. The Press has for some time been laying the foundation for just such a move. It is no surprise to those who have kept in touch with the Press during recent years. It has been an open secret among the newspaper fraternity of Madison county and nearby points that the Press editors were merely awaiting the opportunity to forsake the democratic party and affiliate with an organization where their leadership would be accepted and their wisdom unquestioned. Both Mr. and Mrs. Weekes are bitterly opposed to Web Rice, the democratic nominee for congress, the basis of their opposition being largely personal and dates back to the defeat of Mrs. Weekes for the postmastership at Norfolk. It is deplorable that the public must be bored with the personal differences of individuals, but more or less of this condition crops out in every campaign, and the voters of the Third District will grin and bear it and vote for Robert E. Evans for reelection.—Oakdale Sentinel.

Good Care of Binder Pays.

An efficient binder operator oils little and often those parts where a sufficient supply cannot be maintained, says United States Department of Agriculture farmers' bulletin 947, "Care and Repair of Farm Implements." No other farm machine demands so much attention in this respect as the binder. The operator should familiarize himself with the location of all oil holes and cups and prosecute this duty in a systematic manner so that no bearings will be neglected. This bulletin deals with the various troubles of binder operation, such as bundle and tying troubles and their remedy, platform and elevating canvases, canvas driving chains, outside driver and grain wheel, reel, crown wheel, main wheel, raising and lowering devices, main shaft bearing, countershaft and bevel gear drive packer shaft, needle pitman, discharge arm shaft, etc. The bulletin also deals with mowers in much the same manner as it does with binders. The bulletin may be obtained free from the Nebraska College of Agriculture, Lincoln.

Farm Life Attracting Young People

Statistics gathered from questions submitted to students at the State School of Agriculture at Lincoln show that farm life is now attracting a large number of energetic young men and women and tend to disprove the statement frequently heard that present-day education magnifies the attractions of city life and draws young people away from the farm. Out of 226 boys replying to a questionnaire, 187 said they intend to become farmers, stock raisers or dairymen. Twenty-one wish to be engineers while only four are attracted to enter business. Twenty-two girls replied that they are going to school to increase their efficiency as housekeepers, while thirty plan to teach, two intend to be nurses and eight are undecided. One hundred and forty-eight boys were attracted to this state school because they could obtain instruction in animal husbandry, dairying, crops, soil, management and veterinary work. The girls were attracted largely by the opportunity to study foods, clothing, home making, and teacher training. Of the 226 boys attending this school, 100 had always lived on the farm, 128 had lived on the farm from one to thirty years, and only twenty-eight had no farming experience. Half of the girls had been reared in the country.

2ND MISSION
COMES FROM PHILIPPINES

Body Headed by Senate President Quezon Reiterates Demand for Independence.

That the Filipino people are in earnest in their demand for immediate independence is indicated by the coming to the United States of a second Philippine mission to work for independence. Coincident with this announcement the War Department received a cable from Manila stating that the all-Filipino legislature had adopted resolutions reiterating its plea for immediate independence.

The second mission, like the first, is composed of the leading men of the islands and will work in the United States not only for immediate independence, but also to bring about "better understanding, greater confidence and closer economic relations between the United States and the Philippines."

The mission is again headed by Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, who is well known in America, having been for six years resident commissioner to the United States. Mr. Quezon and the Hon. Sergio Osmena, Speaker of the Philippine House of Representatives and Vice President of the Council of State, are the leaders of the Nacionalista party, which has been in power since 1907.

Senate President Manuel L. Quezon.

While Speaker Osmena is not so well known in the United States as Quezon, he is considered one of the ablest men in the islands. Senate President Quezon recently referred to Osmena as "the greatest Filipino since Rizal."

The personal relations between Osmena and Quezon are probably without a parallel in modern politics. They have been the leading political figures in the islands for 12 years, yet there has never been the slightest indication of rivalry between them. Throughout their college life as well as their long political service each has refused to be a candidate for any position that the other aspired to.

During the years Quezon was the Philippine delegate in the American Congress he won the esteem and confidence of both the Republican and Democratic sides of the chamber. Whenever he spoke he was assured of a good attendance. One of the official short hand reporters once declared Quezon used the purest English of any member of the House.

Osmena, as president of the Nacionalista party, is the leader of the national movement for independence.

"Osmena is the premier 'de facto' of the Philippines," said a leading Filipino Speaker Sergio Osmena.

no journalist, now in America. "A very conscientious and tireless worker, thorough and persistent, a genius for grasping the big features as well as the smallest details of public affairs, cool headed, quiet by temperament and education, a deep thinker, an eloquent speaker, a polished writer, a keen observer of men—such is Osmena."

Both Osmena and Quezon have been consistent advocates of Philippine independence, yet when the occasion demanded it they have never hesitated to champion the cause of America's good intentions toward the Filipino people.

Poster Tells Dramatic Story

This picture, painted especially for the Near East Relief by M. Leone Bracker, vividly portrays what words fail to express—the horrible suffering of the women and children of Armenia and adjacent countries. Peace has blessed Europe and America for more than a year but in Western Asia conditions more frightful than any war time experiences of the martyred populations of Belgium and France still exist. Thousands of women and children escaped massacre by the Turkish soldiers only to face the terrible agonies of death by starvation. At the present time it is estimated that 1,250,000 adults and fully 250,000 orphaned children are completely destitute and in imminent danger of death by starvation and exposure.

The Near East Relief, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, is at present the only organization giving aid to these suffering people and lack of funds still prevents the reaching of more than a small part of the stricken people.
