Mrs. Marie Weekes, editor of the Norfolk Press, and incidentally a Non-Partisan League candidate for Congress from this district, last week propounded 100 questions to Congressman Evans through the medium of her paper. With all due respect to the splendid ability of this splendid woman, we really think that most of these questions are quite "irrelevant and immaterial" as our lawyer friends would say. In fact, they appear to us so much so that they bear the suspicion of having floated down to the Press sanctum sanctorum from the bat house on the hill nearby.—Bloomfield Monitor.

Early Plowing Generally Favored
 Many farmers consider it good practice to plow as early as possible for winter wheat. It is especially true that early and deep plowing increases the yield where the soil is not very fertile, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. With very rich soil it may result in too rank growth of the straw. When plowing is done early somewhat more fertility becomes available in the soil. There is likely to be less weed growth to draw in the food and water supply, the loose soil takes in more of the rain, and the stubble and weeds that are turned under have a longer period to decay and benefit the crop. The soil has more time to settle and become firm and hence a better seed bed is the result. Disking and harrowing will result in a mellow and compact soil for seeding. In order to get the harvested wheat out of the way for early plowing many farmers stack instead of waiting to thresh out of the shock. Rain and other interferences with threshing frequently delay work until early plowing is out of the question.

Nebraska Hens Know the Laying Game.

Thirty hens laid 25 or more eggs each during June in the Nebraska National Egg-Laying Contest being conducted by the College of Agriculture for the purpose of promoting the raising of egg-laying strains of poultry. A Rhode Island Red, the property of an Omaha firm, laid 23 eggs during the month, and a White Wyandotte, also owned in this state, laid 28 eggs. The majority of the high-laying hens are owned by Nebraskans, although hens are entered in the contest from all over the United States. The Single Comb White Leghorns have the largest number of high layers in the contest, although they have been repeatedly outdistanced for first place in the number of eggs laid by an individual hen in a month. Twenty-one of the 30 hens laying 25 or more eggs during June were White Leghorns.

There May Be Delay in Moving Your Telephone

If you order your telephone moved next week you may be told to expect a delay in getting it done.

Nearly half a million other telephone users in the United States will move their telephones this month, too. And for all of them many carloads of wire and other materials will be needed.

A general shortage of materials, as well as a lack of sufficient transportation facilities, is holding back factory output and the telephone companies can't get enough supplies. The factories are months behind in their orders.

In this emergency it will be greatly appreciated if you will order the least possible changes in your telephone equipment. And when you need to have anything done please let us know as far in advance as possible.
