SHE KNEW WHAT WAS IN IT

Little Eve Fairly Well Acquainted With the Varied Contents of the Family Bible.

Bishop Hoss said at a Nashville picnic:

"The religious knowledge of too many adults resembles, I am afraid, the religious knowledge of little Eve. "'So you attend Sunday school regularly?' the minister said to little Eve. "'Oh, yes, sir,' said she.

"'And you know your Bible?"

"'Oh, yes, sir.'

"'Could you, perhaps, tell me something that is in it?'

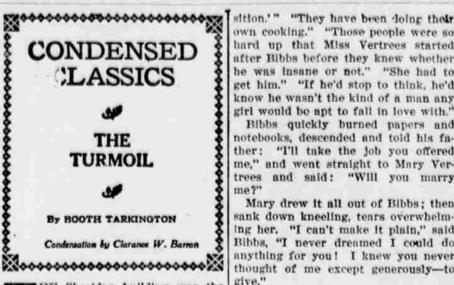

"'I could tell you everything that's In it."

"'Indeed !' And the minister smiled, 'Do tell me, then.'

"'Sister's beau's photo is in it,' said little Eve promptly, 'and ma's recipe for vanishin' cream is in it, and a lock of my hair cut off when I was a baby is in it, and the ticket for pa's watch is in it."

HE Sheridan building was the biggest skyscraper, the Sheridan Trust company, the biggest bank, and Sheridan himself, the biggest builder and broker, and truster and buster under the smoke of a dirty and wonderful midland city that piled tower on tower and spread itself out over the plain of a fair country.

Bibbs Sheridan was his "odd one; the family failure. He grew up only lengthwise, and at twenty-two was the dry scaffolding of a man. Six months in his father's pump works made necessary two years in a sanitarium. He returned to the "new house" on the outskirts of the city in time for the house-warming party. To this came Mary Vertrees, whose family next door maintained the highest air of respectability upon a vanishing fortune. She came under home promptings that led her to dazzle with her wit and beauty both Sheridan and James Sheridan, Jr. When young Jim had proposed, Mrs.

Roscoe Sheridan, his sister-in-law, offered to help Mary in return for help in an affair of her own. Mary saw that in bartering, she was to be bartered with. Her soul rebelled and she declined to marry young Jim Sheridan. He never got the letter.

Sheridan demanded of Bibbs if he would quit dreaming of poetry and follow with Roscoe and Jim to make the business and the city bigger. Bibbs could not understand why anybody wanted to make things bigger.

"Damnation !" roared Sheridan. "Did you ever hear the word 'pros perity!' You ninny! Did you even hear the word 'ambition!' Did you ever hear the word 'progress!' Look at Jim, just completing two more big warehouses at the pump works in half the time the contractors wanted. Jim took the contract himself, found a fellow with a new cement process and we begin using them next week. Now, I'm goin' to make a man of you. By God! I am!" And Bibbs was given two months to get his mental attitude right for the pump works.

Miss Vertrees' note went to the senior Sheridan, as that afternoon one of the new warehouse walls collapsed sending the inventor and James Sheridan, Jr., to their eternity.

Bibbs had to manage the funeral and ride from the cemetery with Mary own cooking." "Those people were so hard up that Miss Vertrees started after Bibbs before they knew whether he was insane or not." "She had to get him." "If he'd stop to think, he'd know he wasn't the kind of a man any girl would be apt to fall in love with." Bibbs quickly burned papers and notebooks, descended and told his father: "I'll take the job you offered me," and went straight to Mary Vertrees and said: "Will you marry Mary drew it all out of Bibbs; then sank down kneeling, tears overwhelming her. "I can't make it plain," said Bibbs, "I never dreamed I could do anything for you! I knew you never thought of me except generously-to

"We were poor, and I think I did mean to marry your brother. But something stopped me from such a sacrilege. I posted the letter, but he never got it."

"You kept me allve and I've hurt you like this," said Bibbs, "Could you forgive me, Mary?"

"Oh, a thousand times! But there's nothing to forgive and you mustn't come to see me any more," she cried in a passion of tears. "Never, never, never !"

He returned in time to tell his sister-in-law in the presence of the famlly: "I proved what you said to me. and disproved what you said of Miss Vertrees. I asked her to marry me and she refused."

Bibbs went with his father and sat in the porch of the temple with the money-changers; worked and talked of nothing but work.

He delved into the ways of the city and its political influence, and begar to buy Intertraction shares where the Vertrees' fortune had vanished.

Soon the Vertrees were able to pay the butcher, hire a cook, and follow the broker's advice to keep the balance of their stock. Sheridan boasted that his plan for Bibbs was working out all right. Still there was something wrong and the doctor and Shertdan agreed that it might be a good thing if Miss Vertrees would permit Bibbs to see her-sometimes.

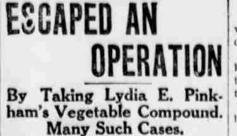

"I had to make Bibbs go my way," Sheridan explained to Miss Vertrees, "but there isn't anything in it to him. He gave up everything he wanted and took the job he never would just for you. There's only one girl he could feel that sorry for. Can't you let him come back?" When Mary responded: "I can't!

He was only sorry for me": the truth "You mustn't---" "I won't tell him. I won't tell anybody anything," said Sheridan.

On a crowded downtown thoroughfare Mary saw Sheridan, at the risk of his life, spring before a moving trolley car and with the whole force of his big body shunt Bibbs from impending danger. The crowd had shrieked warnings, but Bibbs had looked the wrong way.

High up in the Sheridan building, Vertrees, but neither spoke. "He's Bibbs sat down, shaking and sore. He that you have loved me desperately and shows how much you love her!" realized that his father held his own life of no account compared to that of fore had the courage to propose. No, his son. Bibbs perceived what he had I can't marry a man with no more never perceived before-the shadowing of something enormous, indomitable, lawless, irresistible and blindly noble. He looked out into the vast foggy heart of the smoke. The roar of the city beat upon Bibbs' ear until he began to distinguish a pulsation; the voice of the god, Bigness. 'Come and work for me, all men! By your youth and your hope. I summon you! By your age and your despair! By your love of home and woman and children! You shall be blind slaves. For reward you shall gaze only upon my ugliness." Then, the voice came as some music struggling to be born of the Turmoil. "It is man who makes me ugly by his worship of me. If man would let me serve him I should be beautiful.' From the vague contortions of smoke and fog, Bibbs sculptured a gigantic figure with feet pedestalled upon the great buildings and shoulders disappearing in the clouds, a colossus of steel, wholly blackened with soot. He thought up over the clouds unseen from below the giant labored with his hands in the clean sunshine; and Bibbs Sheridan sent for Bibbs, his only imaged what he made there-perhaps hope, offered him vice presidencies, for a fellowship of the children of the children that were children now-a noferred happiness and nine dollars a ble and joyous city, unbelievably white The telephone fiercely summoned him. Later Bibbs and Mary met as he was passing her gate. He apologized: "I-I hate a frozen fish myself, and that three miles was too long for you to put up with one. I've never been able to speak quickly, because if I tried I'd stammer."

Instantly, Mary saw his nature and suffering. They walked on and she invited him into the church to hear some Handel music. It meant, she said, one thing above all others to her -courage.

Thereafter Bibbs went often to the home of Mary Vertrees. "You see," he confided to her. "It is all so simple. I am to feed long strips of zinc into steel jaws that bite it into little circles, 68 a minute. I used to flinch and the workmen laughed."

"It sha'n't hurt you," exclaimed Mary. "All day long, I'll send my thoughts to you; and you must remember that a friend stands beside you."
