Wintering Bees Takes Care

If bees are to be wintered out of doors their preparation for cold weather is one of the most important parts of the beekeeper's work. No other phase of beekeeping has so direct an influence on the honey crop the following season, says United States Department of Agriculture farmers' bulletin 1012, "The Preparation of Bees for Outdoor Wintering." This bulletin gives directions and suggestions for preparing hives for cold weather. The amount and character of packing materials and the most economical type of packing cases are discussed. Another bulletin which will be of interest to beekeepers is farmers' bulletin 1014, "Wintering Bees in Cellars." Both bulletins may be obtained free from the College of Agriculture, Lincoln.

Select Show Corn Early

Corn to be shown at next year's fairs or at the annual show of the Nebraska Crop Improvers' association should be selected from the field early in the fall, according to experts at the State College of Agriculture. Early selection from the field affords a good opportunity to study the corn on the stalk and insures corn undamaged by freezing. Selection of seed corn in the field early in the fall also has its advantages. The Nebraska Crop Improvers' association is offering liberal cash prizes and cups for the best displays of corn, wheat, oats, barley and rye at its annual show during the week of Organized Agriculture. The premium list may be obtained by writing the secretary at University Farm, Lincoln.

The fall of the year, especially after frost has killed the insects, is a good time to paint, according to the State College of Agriculture. Pick out a clear, warm day, and the work can be done unhampered by flies and other insects, wind and dirt. New structures built during the summer will have had time to season. They should be painted before the rain and snow of fall and winter come. It is also well that machinery used during the summer be painted before it is stored away for the winter.

Wm. Gorden of South Sioux City, who was arrested last week on a charge of operating a "moonshine" plant in that burg, gave bonds for his appearance in the county court. Sheriff Cain and Deputy Rockwell raided his place last week and confiscated a "still" and a quantity of "mash." Five half-gallon jugs that had undoubtedly contained "hooch," were broken and dumped in the back yard by some one during the raid. However, enough of the stuff was secured by the officers to convince them that the "still" had been working alright.

State Encourages Farm Ice Houses

Farmers can have ice for comparatively small cost, according to the State College of Agriculture, which is encouraging the construction of ice ponds and ice houses by providing blueprint plans. The College will send any farmer directions for excavating an ice pond which can be filled from the windmill, or for damming a small ravine to catch the run-off water. An excavation four feet deep, 35 feet wide and 60 feet long, will provide ten to twelve tons of ice at a time. The College also provides for a small sum blueprint plans of several kinds of ice houses. Ice houses may be constructed at a small cost, if desired, or a little more time and money will build an elaborate one, probably with a cooling cellar in connection. Work of building the ice pond and ice house, as well as harvesting the ice, can be done in the fall and winter when other work is slack. Once a family enjoys the use of ice for a summer they will never do without it again. An ice house is one of the luxuries of farm life.

He's Not Afraid of Any Job Now

WAS UNABLE TO HIT A LICK OF WORK WHEN HE BEGAN TAKING TANLAC.

"I had fallen off thirty pounds and was unable to work and although I have been taking Tanlac only a little more than a month I have already picked up twenty-five pounds of my lost weight and I am feeling fine," was the statement made by Frank A. Gustafson, a well-known farmer of Manning, Iowa, when he called at the Sherman & McConnell Drug Store in Omaha, a few days ago.

"My troubles had been pulling me down for three years and I had just about played out altogether," he said. "I had given up my work entirely and never expected to be able to hit another lick. My stomach was all out of order and my appetite had about gone down to nothing. I couldn't eat anything except something light and many a time I would get up from the table without eating a bite. I had terrible pains in my stomach and gas would beat me up and cause my heart to beat so fast I thought sometimes I had heart trouble. My head ached so bad at times the pain nearly set me wild and I would get so dizzy I could hardly stand on my feet. At night I would roll and tumble around unable to get much sleep and morning found me feeling worse than when I went to bed. I went down from one hundred and seventy pounds to one hundred and forty, was growing weaker all the time and felt that my time wasn't far."

"But Tanlac came my way and my troubles are now all over. I feel strong and healthy like a man ought to feel and I am not afraid to tackle any kind of work. I have the finest kind of appetite and my big gain in weight, twenty-five pounds, shows how well my food agrees with me. I am not bothered with headaches or dizzy spells any more, and I sleep like a top and get up every morning feeling great. Tanlac has done everything for me I could ask and I recommend it heartily."

Tanlac is sold in Dakota City by Neiswanger Pharmacy, in South Sioux City by McBeath's Pharmacy, in Homer by Brassfield & Jensen, in Hubbard by Duggan & Heffernan. -Advertisement-

Good Layers Vs. Poor Layers

A Nebraska College of Agriculture circular called "How to Select the Good Layers" gives the following characteristics of high producing hens: Mature early for the breed; are vigorous; have good capacity; moult late; moult quickly; have faded shanks (yellow shanked varieties). Poor layers mature slowly; moult early; moult slowly; shanks hold color; have thick pelvic bones—poor capacity. Heavy layers are hearty eaters. A 5-pound hen that produces 200 eggs in a year must convert about 90 pounds of raw material into the finished product—eggs. Hence a fully developed digestive and reproductive system is necessary. The circular gives rules for measuring the body capacity of a hen, as well as rules for telling the other characteristics of good layers. It is recommended that flocks be culled regularly and the poor producers eliminated. Frequent culling during the fall will work the flock down to a high producing basis. Ask the College of Agriculture for Experiment Station circular 12.

Hog Cholera Appears in State

Hog cholera has suddenly appeared in several places in Nebraska and an official warning has been sent out broadcast urging farmers to be on their guard. The State serum plant and several private serum plants reported heavy calls for serum during September, indicating that cholera or signs of cholera were present over a considerable area of the state. Vaccination is the only way to combat the disease. It may be that laxity in the use of serum this year is the main cause for the outbreak. Farmers are urged to watch their hogs carefully. When a sick hog is found it should be isolated at once and a diagnosis made. Vaccination will prevent the disease if applied in time.
