"ROYMENTS"

If it hadn't been for the negro question in the south the electoral vote for Harding would have been unanimous.

Cox must have been right about that $15,000,000 campaign fund. It proved to be nearly enough to buy up the entire democratic party.

Edgar Howard says that Bryan's silence did it. If that is true his silence certainly proved a blamed sight more effective than his noise in former campaigns.

Cox says he is going over to Europe to study conditions. Better stay at home if he ever expects to run for office again. Wilson's trip to Europe is what cooked his goose, and the cooking of Wilson's goose also cooked Cox's goose.

The statesman stood on the burning deck. Having trouble by the peck, His friends they called, he would not go, He loved his League of Nations so.

And as the flames around his roared, He swore he'd surely stay aboard Until the flames they burned his back For he had a mind with a single track.

He waived his arms and showed wild, "The League of Nations is my child, For I went to Paris and brought it back, And I've got a mind with a single track."

The flames roared on, he heeded them not, But for his League he nobly fought, Until the deck it gave away And he was hurled beneath the spray.

Now the moral of this mournful tale Leaves the child to weep and wail For its daddy, who'll ne'er come back, Tho he has a mind with a single track.

The Herald's Letter Box

Glendale, Cal., Nov. 18th. Dear Friends of Dakota City:—As I am sitting here in the sunshine of California thinking, there are some of my old friends wondering and perhaps would like to know how I am getting along. I can tell you there is no place like California. It certainly is a nice place. I have a home here, furnished, and all kinds of fruits and the nicest flowers you ever saw. It is certainly lovely, and no cold weather.

I have been out planting some early garden, and will plant some more soon; the weather is like the good old summer time in Dakota City, only this is November, you must remember, and a long way from old Dakota City. I live about a half mile from my brother, Levi C. Yeoman. He certainly has a beautiful home, on Orange street; I live on West Elk street. No rent to pay and no fuel to buy, just think of that. Give me California in preference to Dakota county; here where the honey bee gathers honey the year 'round and the flowers bloom every day in the year. As for the high cost of living, that is about the same here as in Nebraska. Mostly retired people live in Glendale. This is twenty miles from where John Dewit lives. He is still in the hospital, and they do not expect much change in his condition. He is a little better, but he cannot come home yet. He has had two strokes of paralysis, and you all know what the next one will likely be. I have had a three days' visit from Virgil Bookhart, and also attended a reception and dinner given for him at Levi C. Yeoman's. Virgil is in the navy, and expects to sail for San Francisco and other points this week, and will be out till March 1st before they will return.

Will close, with best wishes to all inquiring friends. Mrs. M. N. Lattin.

Hen Laid 268 Eggs in Year.

One White Leghorn hen laid 268 eggs during the first year of the egg laying contest being conducted by the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station at Lincoln. This is about 200 eggs more than the average hen lays. The first year of the contest ended November 1. About 1,000 pullets were entered in the contest, the most of them from Nebraska. Pullets laying 200 or more eggs each during the year represented breeds in the following numbers: White Leghorn, 24; Rhode Island Red, 2; White Wyandotte, 2; Silver Laced White Wyandotte, 1; White Orpington, 1; White Rock, 1; Barred Plymouth Rock, 1; Rhode Island White, 1. C. Bonsall, of Fairbury, won a cup for the best Rhode Island Red record; Wayland W. Magee, of Bennington, a cup for the best Plymouth Rock record; and the Pierce Poultry yards of Atkinson a cup for the best individual records for Orpingtons, Wyandottes, Langshans and Rhode Island Whites. The White Leghorn prize was won by Kiel Bros., Cincinnati Ohio. The purpose of the contest is to encourage the breeding of better laying poultry.

HEALTH DRIVES PROVE SUCCESS

Red Cross Centers Are Teaching Public How to Keep in Condition.

Realizing the importance of combating and preventing diseases this winter, the American Red Cross Health centers are centering their efforts on health campaigns in the various states of the central division. The health center is of even greater service to the well than the sick, for by means of health education it prevents diseases and conducts its health campaigns to meet local needs. A Red Cross health center may be only a room with a volunteer or paid lay worker in charge, yet it can be a most important factor in the prevention of diseases and the promotion of health in the community. The health center work has advanced so rapidly during the last year it now is a part of the civic welfare organization in the majority of towns.

For the coming health campaigns in the states, particular attention is being paid to the small community and to the outlying districts. The influence of the chapter's headquarters is being considerably increased or extended throughout the county by the establishment of small branch health centers in the more remote sections. Volunteers Aid Work.

In most cases these branch centers are being placed entirely under volunteer management and the exhibits, demonstrations, lectures and the like of the main health service are being repeated at each of the branches.

In reports from many chapters it is found that the health center director is resourceful to the extent that she does not wait until people call individually at the health center for information. She will stimulate constant demand for health information and provoke inquiry. In this way she reaches many who otherwise would be neglected. In still other counties where trained workers are not available at this time, some women have stepped in and organized the work and carried it on until they have received assistance.

The Red Cross health center is governed by business principles, applies business methods, and, in its more simple form, can be established and conducted by lay people.

Uses Business Methods. It proceeds upon the demonstrated fact that health is a commodity that can be bought and sold like brooms and soap. Therefore, it establishes itself in a store room in the principal business section of the community. It displays its goods in the form of attractive health exhibits in its show windows. It advertises constantly and extensively. And it uses every business and social device to attract customers.

The Red Cross health center is of service to the sick in that it obtains reliable and complete information about existing clinics, hospitals, sanatoria and other institutions for the sick and the defective; about available nurses, both trained and practical; about when to consult a physician and why to shun the quack and his nostrums. The central division has thirty-three health centers in operation. Many of them also conduct medical clinics, but the one chief, outstanding feature of the American Red Cross health center is its health education service which teaches well people to keep well.

RED CROSS ALWAYS READY IN DISASTER

The Red Cross is always prepared. When disaster hits a community this organization can be depended upon to follow right at its heels with help for the stricken people.

Red Cross relief is always forthcoming—food, clothing, shelter and funds; doctors, nurses and special workers with long experience in handling similar. No matter what the disaster may be—fire, flood, earthquake, explosion, bad wreck or tornado—the Red Cross is always able to cope with the situation.

During the last year there was an average of four disasters a month in the United States. One hundred and fifty communities in twenty-seven states suffered. The largest and most destructive of these were the tidal wave at Corpus Christi, Tex., and tornadoes in Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

In these events of horror, 850 persons were killed, 1,500 were injured, 13,000 were made homeless, about 30,000 families needed help, the property loss was nearly $100,000,000 and almost $1,000,000 in relief funds, not including emergency supplies, was expended.

To the sufferers from all disasters during the year the American Red Cross sent $120,000 worth of supplies, 110 Red Cross nurses and seven special relief trains. To meet the needs of the stricken, the organization set up ten relief stations, operated thirty food canteens and as many emergency hospitals. One hundred and twenty-five Red Cross chapters gave disaster relief service.

If disaster ever strikes this town or county, the citizens can be absolutely sure the Red Cross will be on hand to help them in every way.
