

SHE DIDN'T DARE TO LEAVE HOUSE

On Verge of Nervous Collapse, Indiana Woman Was Almost Helpless.

HER FRIENDS DISHEARTENED

Troubles Disappear When She Takes Tanlac, and Nerves Now Are as Steady as Can Be—General Health Splendid.

"I was on the verge of a collapse and was actually afraid to leave the house, but I am overjoyed now at the way Tanlac has restored my health so perfectly," declared Mrs. Cora M. Jackson, 504 Mulberry St., Terre Haute, Ind.

"I was almost a nervous wreck, and at times for anyone to even talk to me upset me completely. Even at night I could not get easy and quiet and would lie wide-awake, hardly able to sleep at all, and often just got up out of bed, I was so restless. Nervous headaches often came on me and frequently lasted for days at a time. Then I had rheumatism so bad in my joints I was almost helpless. My legs and elbows hurt fearfully and sometimes I just ached all over. There seemed to be no relief for me, my friends were all worried and I was almost disheartened.

But, happily for me, one of my friends suggested that I try Tanlac. I never will forget how I began to improve and now I think it is wonderful, that I am feeling so well and strong. My nerves are just as steady as can be and I haven't a rheumatic pain about me. I am in just splendid health and wish everybody knew what a grand medicine Tanlac is."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

SO WEAK SO NERVOUS

How Miserable This Woman Was Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

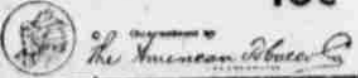

Toomsboro, Ga.—"I suffered terribly with backache and headache all the time, was so weak and nervous I didn't know what to do, and could not do my work. My trouble was deficient and irregular periods. I read in the papers what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to give it a trial. I got good results from its use so that I am now able to do my work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. C. F. PHILLIPS, Toomsboro, Ga.

Weak, nervous women make unhappy homes, their condition irritates both husband and children. It has been said that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," irritability and backache arise from some displacement or derangement of a woman's system. Mrs. Phillips' letter clearly shows that no other remedy is so successful in overcoming this condition as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LATE WORD ABOUT NICE SUMMER SUITS

IN THE long story of spring and summer suits there are so many interesting chapters dealing with suits of unusual character, that the fashion reporter is apt to forget those that are plain and unpretentious. But these are most useful and most important. While anyone may manage to get along without an elaborate or formal suit—if she must—the plainer street suit is essential and merits study, especially as it contrives to be as smart as its dressier kindred, and by more subtle means. It has arrived, in the company of others more pretentious, for summer time and all of them entice the fashion writer to begin over again in writing the story of suits.

Among formal suits there are those that consist of a one-piece dress with coat to match, in which a bodice of foulard or crepe de chine or other material is joined to a cloth skirt.

The colors in the silk body suggest those used in embellishing the coat with embroidery or otherwise. The French love this elaboration of the tailored suit and an imported model reveals red and blue foulard in the body of a dress joined to navy serge in the skirt by an embroidered girdle in blue at a low waistline.

For the business of living every day and fitting into whatever the day may bring such practical suits as those pictured are late acquisitions in the shops. It will be noticed that their skirts are longer and wider than skirts have been, that coats are open at the front and provided with either a narrow belt or wide girdle of the material. One of them is split at the sides and employs buttons as a decoration while the other relies upon triangles of the material as a finish.

COSTUMES FOR MAIDS

MANY a bridesmaid this year is destined to see herself arrayed in fascinating bouffant skirt and picture hat. What with the Spanish influence, the Louis XV influence and others, with crisp taffeta and organdie, in lovely colors, standing by to encourage the bride in her selection, it will be hard for her to resist these quaint styles. They make a charming background for her own gown, as well as a lovely wedding procession and may be worked out in many materials, as lace, georgette, silk, satin, tulle, often with silver tissue as a foundation for transparent draperies. But taffeta and organdie lend themselves especially well to their making, either alone or in combination.

either of them is associated with lace, chiffon or tulle, tulle serving especially well as a foundation to be veiled with the sheerest fabrics.

It serves in the costume shown at the left of the two pictured above, in a dress veiled with organdie, decorated with corded frills of the taffeta applied at the sides in short festoons. These corded frills help support the bouffant drapery and the texture of organdie or tulle is adapted to it. But it is often necessary, to use with for this purpose. The wide, crushed girdle with buoyant bow and long shawl ends is important in this dress.

If the bride is not interested so much in picturesque "period" dresses as in those of her own time she may do her maids a good turn by choosing embroidered crepe de chine or georgette and having it made as in the dress illustrated at right of the picture. Or it might be developed in embroidered voile which is displayed in many beautiful colors. The advantage of this model is its usefulness in the wardrobe. Pretty organdie dresses make a good choice for the same reason. Organdie is shown in all colors including the tints peculiar to this season and now fashionable. The way of the June bride is easy this year, when her bridesmaids' dresses are under discussion—her path is strewn with lovely materials in beautiful color, and the styles are varied and artistic. The maids are to be congratulated.

OCTOPUS FIGHTS CREW OF LINER

Washed on Deck in Storm, It Puts Up Fierce Battle Before Being Killed.

New York.—A huge cuttlefish stood off the crew of the Cunard liner Caronia for a 15-minute battle on the high seas, according to members of the crew. The cuttlefish was cast aboard during a storm, and before it could be subdued injured several men with its six-foot tentacles and bit the ship's carpenter, John Taggart, severely. The Caronia's 3,578 passengers vouched for the fighting fish. Two days out from Queenstown heavy seas washed all over the vessel. On Monday morning, when the rough weather ceased, the carpenter began a tour of inspection, that stopped in the forecastle head, where the cuttlefish, as long as himself, lashed out at him.

The razor-edged tentacles ripped into Taggart's arms as he closed in, and at bay, the cuttlefish hit the bold carpenter's hands. Taggart retreated, shouting for help. Members of the crew rushed to his aid and Capt. E. G. Digele hurried down from the bridge to join the rescue squad.

Man after man turned back from the flying tentacles, which tasted blood again and again. Finally a dozen heavy salts armed with varied weapons, ranging from the cook's cleaver to the carpenter's saw, backed down the deck and laid low the monster of the deep. Just 15 minutes the fish lasted before he had to take the count.

The body of the fish was brought to port and was exhibited as proof of the fight.

WROTE HIS WILL AND DIED

Engineer, Pinned Under Locomotive, Remembers Wife While Men Work Frantically to Rescue Him.

Cincinnati.—Pinned under a locomotive that had fallen through broken trestle work of a bridge here, and realizing that he was mortally wounded, Frank Meyers, railroad engineer, of Covington, Ky., wrote his will while men were striving frantically to release him in the hope of saving his life.

A beam had penetrated Meyers' abdomen, steam was hissing from the wrecked locomotive under which he was fastened, men were shouting and women shrieking as the ineffective efforts at rescue proceeded. Through it all the dying man remained calm, called for a piece of paper and a pencil and wrote the following will as the others watched his agonized efforts at self-control:

"I leave all I have to my wife." Meyers signed his name and asked a fireman and a policeman to sign as witnesses. Soon afterward he died.

TIGERS USEFUL IN SUMATRA

Lords of the Jungle Protected for Their Services as Destroyers of Wild Boars.

Tiger hunting is now prohibited in Sumatra. Lest our national pride should be touched, let it be said that this measure has nothing to do with M. Clemenceau—there is no fear of seeing the fauna of the big island destroyed by European ex-penetrators on their travels.

No, the truth is more prosaic. Truth is always prosaic.

In Sumatra the tigers are protected because they devour the wild boars, which are great despoilers of the plantations. The tigers are in a way monstrous cats preying on enormous rats.

Here is a domestic and utilitarian role of which Kipling, poet of the jungle, never dreamed.—From the Paris Figure.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Beyond Cure.

Steve arrived late at his work nearly every morning, and the warehouse manager took him before the manager hoping by this means to cure him.

"This is a serious case," said the manager, with assumed sternness. "What have you to say for yourself, my lad?"

"Aw! say nowt about it, sir, if yo' don't," replied Steve.

"H'm! Have you ever been up before me since you started working here?" continued the manager.

"Dunno, sir," replied Steve. "What time do yo' mostly get up?"—Los Angeles Times.
