In order to keep their sheep free from stomach worms many farmers change pasture once a month, according to the Nebraska College of Agriculture. This is about the only way stomach worms, which kill a good many sheep in the early summer, can be controlled. Several remedies have been advocated, such as the use of gasoline or copper sulphate, but they are somewhat difficult to administer and can not be relied on. Prevention is the best method yet known. It is advocated that care be taken not to over-pasture or crowd, and the pasture should be changed three or four times during the summer if possible.

NEBRASKA LEADS ALL STATES.
Nebraska now leads all states in the joint national and state campaign for the improvement of live stock. The United States department of agriculture recently notified the state college of agriculture that Nebraska had headed Virginia out of first place in the number of animals enrolled in the pure bred sire campaign. Nebraska now has 32,118 head of animals and 64,461 head of poultry listed, and applications have been made for several thousand more head. Virginia still leads in the number of farmers using nothing but pure bred sires, but more animals are kept per farm in Nebraska. Virginia has 1,139 farmers enrolled, against 554 for this state. However, Nebraska is enrolling additional farmers at rapid rate, 75 applications having been made since the department of agriculture made its report.

CORN COST 49c TO PRODUCE.
The 1920 corn crop cost an average of 49 cents a bushel to produce in one of the central counties of the state, according to figures recently published by the college of agriculture. The average cost was figured from records kept by members of the county farm bureau. The figure is considered conservative, as the work was charged for at a comparatively low rate and no allowance was made for interest on investment. The yields on the farms studied ranged from 35 to 50 bushels to the acre, and the cost per acre varied from $9.82 to $21.70. The man whose corn cost but $9.82 used hogs to harvest the crop, thereby saving the cost of husking and probably marketing his corn to better advantage. The figures not only shed light on the cost of producing crops, but they contribute interesting facts on farm management. The number of farmers hogging down their corn is increasing every year, and these figures strengthen the position of those who believe the practice economical.

PROMPT CUTTING MEANS MORE ALFALFA.
Experiments at the Nebraska agricultural experiment station would seem to indicate that alfalfa produces more if cut at the proper time. Tests were made for total yields per season when alfalfa was cut two, three, four and five times. It was found that three or four cuttings, depending on the season, gave the largest yield in the eastern part of the state. There are two indexes for proper cutting time. One is the appearance of the first bloom and the other the starting of a new growth at the crown and lower part of the old stems. Cutting should begin at the appearance of either index. Experiments also show that getting the hay into the stack or barn at the proper time means a saving of more leaves, which form 50 per cent of the value of the hay. In good drying weather a half day in the swath and a day in the windrow will ordinarily do. It is often better to stack a little green and let the hay brown cure than to have it rained on or lose too many leaves. Rain or dew is more likely to cause mold in the stack than the moisture in the plant.

COUNTRY OF SWEET SCENTS
French City of Lyons Center of Region Which Supplies the World With Perfume.
Lyons, in France, is the city of scents. It is the center of a region which supplies the world with perfumes, and has the only university that offers a course in perfumery-making to students. Within the last few years Lyons has developed a great laboratory system for the manufacture of artificial perfumes by the process of synthetic chemistry. Thus its technical experts convert oil of verbena into violet and lily-of-the-valley, oil of camphor into haliotrope, aniseed oil into hawthorne, oil of clove into vanilla, and oil of rosewood into bergamot. Toluene (a derivative of coal tar) they transform into jasmine and artificial rose. From xylene (likewise a coal tar product) they obtain artificial musk.
Roses are grown on an immense scale in the region about Lyons for the manufacture of perfumery. Likewise sage, thyme and sweet marjoram. That region produces 90 per cent of the total world's output of real lavender oil, representing a value of 20,000,000 francs a year. One concern has 10 square miles planted with lavender.
