GLACIER National Park
The Gladdest Spot

—The most-talked-of place in America by out-of-door folk, is a "hikers" and "horsebackers" joyland.

Up there in the Northern Rockies in Northwestern Montana, there are fifteen hundred square miles of breathing room—loafing space; forests, hundreds of sparkling streams which meander through valleys ablaze with wild flowers, and tumble over foaming waterfalls to feed two hundred and fifty mountain lakes of rare beauty. In the "high-spots" there are eternal, slow-moving glaciers, astride the pagant of carved and tinted peaks. The thrill, the majesty, the bigness of it all is wonderful.

To live for a time in this "high" land is a never-to-be-forgotten experience. You'll straightway develop an amazing appetite.

If you are a fisherman, you'll enjoy battling with the trout. If you are a hiker, there's no end of trails to follow to your heart's content.

If you love to ride, a sturdy little mountain pony will carry you over skyland trails.

Mountain guides—chaps you'll enjoy getting acquainted with—are there to accompany the timid.

Rowboat and launch service, auto-stages on a mountain motor highway, are there for your pleasure and convenience. If you like to "take your hotel with you" and camp, there are scores of ideal spots.

The chalets—little hotel villages in the mountains—are picturesque tarrying-places.

Two mammoth mountain inns, where unique indoor campfires crackle on evenings in the "forest lobbies" provide accommodations of a more elaborate character.

The whole scheme of service within Glacier readily lends itself to the out-of-door idea—follow the dictates of your fancy.

Better plan to go this summer and enjoy a real vacation.
