Catarrahal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrahal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrahal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces. ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE. All Druggists. Circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

It is an old rule to "buy when every one else wants to sell, and to sell when every one else wants to buy." There are a lot of things cheap in the market today because many people wish to sell. There are cheap cattle, sheep, horses and farm lands. They will never be worth less—they are almost certain to be worth more soon.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone Company has asked for a raise in telephone rates at Dakota City, and at a number of other points, and the Nebraska state railway commission has granted them a hearing at Lincoln on December 28th. If there is no organized effort to defeat it, the raise will undoubtedly be granted. The Bell Telephone company undoubtedly does not know that the war is over.

John Deering, of Winnebago, Neb., who had his right leg amputated at the St. Joseph's hospital a few weeks ago, died Thursday night of last week. The remains were taken to Winnebago for burial. The funeral was held Saturday. He was born in Juniata county, Pa., and was in his 73rd year. Two brothers, Joe Deering, of Milwaukee, Wis., and Jesse Deering of Pennsylvania, and a sister, Mrs. Harry Hill, of Allen, survive him.

A meeting for river protection was held at the court house Saturday evening, and the committee of ten named to outline a new district made their report. COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES
W. E. VOSS, Superintendent

The question of legal holidays that apply to schools is one that comes up every year, and brings with it its annual troubles and misunderstandings which have no real foundation for existing. The only reason that I can see why we have to contend with these things is because we have people who create law in the minds of the public covering that which meets their own convenience. On the other hand, there are members of the public who fill for this bancombe because it serves to get away from work and affords an opportunity to carry out the federal law of life at some one's expense. To make more certain that this scheme can be worked, it seems that some people were anxious to have the matter of holidays covered in the school law books. Accordingly, they must have persuaded the publishers of the school law books to insert Section 5512 of the Negotiable Instrument law so that they could conveniently point to it to induce the unsuspecting authorities to permit the taking of the holiday sought. Yet for all of this, I wish to assure you that there are no legal holidays in Nebraska for schools, except those granted by the majority of the members of the school board. I may add, too, that there are no legal holidays at all in Nebraska except Sundays. The so-called legal holidays that we have in this state merely govern the dating and dealing in commercial papers, and, accordingly, major business transactions. I hope that hereafter no teachers will close their schools for holidays except for those set aside by their school boards.

Call Out the Cockerels

On nearly all the farms in Nebraska poultry is kept as a side line. It may be either profitable or unprofitable according to the system of poultry management. One of the many things that cause considerable loss in the flock is the presence of many cock birds and cockerels of indifferent quality, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. These birds not only take up valuable floor space, which, in so many cases is inadequate for the hens and pullets, and eat a great of the food that the laying hens need to manufacture egg whites but they continually worry the hens and pullets to such an extent that egg production is very frequently sacrificed to some extent. A great number of the poorly developed pullets owe their condition to the presence of cockerels during the late summer and early fall. It is true that at present cockerels and cock birds are not bringing a very high price on the market, but there are many that would better be given away than kept in the flock with their disturbing influence.

In warm weather the quality of eggs is reduced about twenty per cent by the male birds fertilizing the eggs. These fertile eggs will start to hatch at seventy degrees and frequently after twenty-four hours of such temperature, the yolk will show a very decided "hatch spot." Even in the winter time many eggs are held in the house where the temperature causes fertile eggs to depreciate in quality.

It will be much better to sell all of your male birds unless there are some that show unusual vigor and standard qualities. If any male birds are kept for breeders, they should be penned separately. Next spring, in the breeding season, good male birds can be purchased at a price quite reasonable when you consider the feed, care and disturbance that go with keeping them through the winter.

PUREBREDS FOR THE BLOCK

A Nuckolls county, Nebraska farmer is producing 300 market hogs a year, says the Register at Sturgis, at present number to 1000 a year. He believes in purebreds for market. He recently said to a swine specialist of the Nebraska College of Agriculture, "About five years ago I started using good purebred boars on my grade sows. Each year since that a higher percent of my hogs have topped the market. They are more uniform and feed a lot better. I keep books on my hogs and I know that those good boars have paid for themselves a good many times. This year I am going to buy a good bunch of purebred gilts, the best I can find. I expect to change to purebreds during the next two years because I know that they will make me more money and that's why I am raising them. I don't believe I can ever make the change for less money than I can right now."

Mulching the Strawberry Bed

Mulching is one of the essentials of successful strawberry culture, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. Its chief purposes are to prevent heating the plants by alternate freezing and thawing and to prevent injury from dry winds in the winter. A mulch also helps to conserve moisture in the spring months; it keeps down weeds; it may be used to retard blooming in the spring if that seems advisable.

Wheat straw is as near the ideal mulch as can be obtained but even here grain remaining in the straw may give trouble by germinating. Oak straw may be used but tends to pack somewhat tightly. Prairie hay or cornstalks are not suitable because of their coarseness. The mulch should be applied soon after the first freeze. It should be spread uniformly between and over the rows, to a depth of 4 to 6 inches.
