Not a very large house greated the presentation of "The New Dominion" at the opera heuse last Monday night but it was deserving the best patronage the city affords. The play is charming and the players make it very entertaining. The part of the German baron by Edgar A. Martin could hardly be improved uponthe guilelessness, yet withal the shrewdness of a German nobleman who is a scientist for pleasure and who is not very well acquainted with the English language, is delightfully and humorously portrayed. Otis Bass and Miss Emma Kaper, well H. O. Martin plays the "villain's" part in Josephine, a sprightly young southern beauty, by Mrs. Delaney, were splendidly done; while the baron's sweetheart, played by Mrs. William Frackelton, was considing of some in the caste but the leading soon will efface.
