Owing to the heavy passenger travel from the east Wednesday No. 41 was composed of two sections.

W. M. Fosket, our Hemingford friend, was in the city Wednesday forenoon en route home from Omaha, where he marketed cattle last week. Mr. Fosket spent a week there visiting but says the weather was so disagreeable that he didn't care to be out much. The duck hunting season brings with it not only royal sport, but there is also an occasional accident to report by the premature discharge of firearms. While out hunting last Friday, Norbert Frohnappel met with a painful accident. He was in the act of shooting when both barrels of his shotgun were discharged simultaneously, the hammers of the gun striking Norbert in the cheek with such force as to badly lacerate it. Aside from the pain, the young man will not suffer serious results from the injury.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Allison of Lakeside came in from the ranch Saturday, remaining till Sunday. Mr. Allison called to have his stock brand inserted in this paper saying that if it had appeared therein before it would have saved him trouble and expense in finding some cattle which had strayed. The benefit of advertising stock brands should be apparent to every stockman, especially so during the winter months when stock is so likely to stray off in storms. Owing to THE HERALD'S unequalled circulation in this section of the state your brands will become familiar to all stockmen if it appears on THE HERALD'S brand page and may be the means of saving you many dollars. Estray notices will be inserted free on the brand page to those who have their brands advertised.

A September Snow Storm.

The old adage that wonders never cease was forcibly brought to mind even to the oldest inhabitant last Sunday and Monday when this section was visited by a snow storm that would have been considered a stem-winder in the middle of winter. But as the storm was of a general nature, visiting a vast area of country, the people of Box Butte county can not feel that they have been treated impartially or that the weather man had it in for us alone. The weather Sunday was cloudy and raw with occasional spits of snow during the afternoon. By evening however the snow storm upon us with full force accompanied by a stiff, cold wind from the north. The storm was continued with scarcely an intermission until Tuesday evening. While the landscape was covered with two or three inches of the beautiful, the atmosphere remained above freezing point thus evading any serious results to range stock. The snow soon disappeared after the storm and aside from a light frost Tuesday morning there is nothing left to tell the tale but history of Alliance's mid-winter weather in September, A. D. 1903.

The scarcity of eggs in the local markets the past few days has been a sore distress to public meal caterers as well as to the private household. This state of affairs has originated the idea in the minds of several Alliancites to enter into the chicken business on an extensive scale. It is argued and backed up by a long column of figures that a person can make an independent fortune in hen raising within the short space of three years. That there is money to be made at poultry raising in Box Butte county is a cinch, but the profits to be derived from such an investment in that space of time should be confined to a modest fortune.

Something New to Him.

The Natrona County (Wyo.) Tribune relates following regarding a young man's first glimpse of a railroad train:

"E. P. Sheldon, a young man from Lander, about 25 years of age, arrived in Casper last week, and for the first time in his life saw a railroad train. He had some idea what the train looked like, but the puffing of the engine, the escaping steam, the ringing of the engine bell and the rumbling of the car wheels over the steel track was all new to him and of course was a great curiosity. Mr. Sheldon trailed some sheep from Fremont county to Casper for shipment, and he went to South Omaha with the shipment, where he no doubt will see many things that will excite his curiosity and cause him to wonder."
