ANIMAL IMITATIVENESS.

Herv a Deggar's Plag Groves to Be Like His Muster,

"One of the most curions traits to be found in the animal nature," said an observant citizen, "is that which grows out of the unconscious imitativeness of creatures of the lower order. I have observed many instances of where the creatures of a lower order have taken on the characteristics in some noticeable degree of members of the human family. One might know, for instance, the beggar's dog from the look of the dog, from the droop of the eye, the pathetic hang of the lip and a certain general air of despondency and hopelessness which seems to speak in the very nature of the animal. I mention the beggar's dog because it is a familiar example. The beggar's dog never looks cheerful, never smiles, never frolics. but simply sits by his master and broods and begs for whatever charity may give.

"I have seen the dog character molded under happier influences, and the dog became more cheerful. He was a light hearted, free and easy sort of creature and seemed to get something of the sunnier side of things. I am almost tempted to say that if you will show me a man's dog I will tell you what manner of man the owner is, with particular reference to temperament and his moods. The melancholy man, the man who grovels mentally along the gloomier groves, the pessimistic man who is always looking at the dark side of the picture, all the men who come with in these unhappy classifications rarely own a cheerful dog. The dog unconsciously takes to the ways of the tanster and in his moods imitates the master's way of thinking.

"But turn to the dog of the jolly, cheerful fellow. Watch him show his teeth in laughter when the master approaches. He is darting across the yard and dancing and frisking around sissippi, he studied diligently and by the master's feet in the happiest way tmaginable, and he is up to all kinds of up in the rules of debate. pranks and does all kinds of Uttle things to indicate the good nature that Islature a motion was introduced and is in him. Ife does as his master does and seems to take the same general view of life. These are small things, ' guess, but bey show just how important one's way of thinking may influence one's dog and change his whole view of Mfc."-New Orleans Times Democrat.

ROLLING AN UMBRELLA.

The Proper Way Is to Twist Ribs

and Stick Together, "Why is it," asked an inquisitive customer in a downtown umbrella store, that one can never roll up an umbrella as compactly and neatly as it is rolled when he buys it?" "You can if you only know how," sald the salesman, "but if everybody knew how it would mean less business for us. The umbrelles would last longer, and there would be a lot less work for the repairers. "Perhaps I shouldn't tell you how," the clerk continued, "but it's so simple you should know anyhow. If you have noticed, nearly everybody who rolls up an umbrella takes hold of it by the handle and keeps twisting the stick with one hand while he folds and rolls with the other hand. 'Now, that's just where the mistake comes in. Instead of twisting with the handle he should take hold of it just above the points of the cover ribs. These points naturally lie evenly around the stick. Keep hold of these, pressing them tightly against the stick, and then roll up the cover. Molding the ribs prevents them from getting twisted out of place or bending out of shape. Then the silk is bound to fold evenly and roll smooth and tight. "Roll your umbrella this way, and until it is old enough to get rusty looking it will look as if it had just come from the shop."-New York Herald.

The Previous Question.

Old Senator Nesmith of Oregon, one of the first settlers of the state, used to tell this story: At the time when Oregon was admitted as a state and the first legislature of the state met Nesmith, who was a member, possessed himself of a copy of a book on parlinmentary procedure.
