Mr. Reck Awarded Contract.

Alliance has reason to feel proud of the uccess attained by its contractors and ouilders who have won merited praise throughout the state as experts in their line of business. The latest achievement is that made by S. C. Reck, who was awarded the contract for building the new court house at Rushville. The contract price of Mr. Reck was $17,325, or $27 less than the next lowest bid. There were siv idders in all. Three from Omaha, one rom Arlington and the other from Chad-The new court house in the contract described as follows; The basement of the building is to be of stone, the balance of the structure Alliance Pressed Brick Co's brick, with galvanized ornices and trimmings, and window sills o be of Hot Springs sandstone. The size s to be 40x68 feet with wing 34x52 feet. The entrance tower is to be 12 feet square and 40 feet high. The building will be wo stories and basement, the basement eing fitted for heating, coal supply and with sanitary conveniences. The county offices will be provided with four separate vaults some of which extend from the basement to the second story. The court room provided for will be 40x98 feet in size. The building is to be completed by December first and Mr. Reck has already set about the commencement of the work, which will be pushed forward with all possible speed.

A Special That Was "It."

The Western Publisher of Chicago in its ssue for this month reproduces several pictures from our special edition including the interior view of the HERALD office and the half-tone of the publisher and his assistant, several ranch views and the hunting scene of Miss Ina Bellwood. speaking of the special edition the Pub-lisher says:

Talk about your special numbers! The April 8th issue of the Alliance, (Neb.) Herald was certainly one of the greatest finds that ever came out of our mail bag. It wss replete with thrilling and enterprising matter, from Indians and cowboys to a pinhead in Wind Cave. There are to show with pride what Alliance was

'away back in 1904." The Omaha corespondent of the Western Publisher says: The Alliance Herald's Industrial Edition, in preparation for many weeks, was given to the public about the middle of April, and one does not have to closely examine its twenty large pages without the cover to readily determine that a vast amount of labor and expense has been bestowed upon the publication. The title page, in colors ("Alliance in 1888,") is a production of rare beauty, and is sure to attract attention wherever seen. It is a representation of Indians mounted on bronchos viewing passage of a railroad train in the distance, and brings vividly to mind the condition and surroundings of that section of Nebraska less than two Marie, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. decades ago. In all of the pages abound illustrations, some of them very fine and ments and serious apprehensions are felt generally of a character to invite attention and study. Among them may be mentioned ranch scenes, the city of Alliance in 1904. Belmont tunnel on the B. & M. Red Cloud, the famous ex-chief of the Sioux, the Custer battlefield, etc., etc. All are accompanied with a well planned and well executed writeup. In the matter of souvenir editions the palm must be awarded to the Alliance HERALD, for it is shall embrace 640 acres of land; (b) that difficult to see how what has been wrought could be improved upon. The Junior Normal.

Superintendent W. H. Bartz has every arrangement made for the forthcoming Junior Normal, which begins in this city next week. Judging from the number of rooms engaged and other provisions made by the prospective students, the session will be well attended. While the normal last year had a greater scope of territory to draw from, as Sheridan county held no institute, which it will this year, the attendance from the immediate section surrounding Alliance promises to be larger than ever. The lecture course, which will take place during the normal is looked forward to with great anticipation and we be-

Inspection Car in Alliance.

A novel piece of mechanical construction in the way of an inspection car has been attracting the attention of railroad men down at the shops the past few days. The car is built to the head end of a locomotive. In general appearance it resembles a motor car. The purpose of this odd looking combination is for inspecting the roadbed and general surroundings of the Burlington right-of-way to the best advantage. The car is built close to the track, so that every rail and tie can be inspected without hindrance. The interior is the perfection of mechanical neatness and skill and affords almost all the comforts of a buffet car. Engineer J. P. Cox who has charge of it, built the car after a design drawn by Superintendent E. Bignell, at the Havelock shops, and it is quite feather in the young man's cap as a machinist. Mr. Cox has complete control of the train, which, besides the locomotive, carries two and some times three coaches, He sits on an easy, cushioned seat beside that of Superintendent Calvert, and has the throttle, steam, air and sand gauges at new city blocks. If T. J. O'Keefe and his assistant editor. J. B. Kniest, overlooked assistant editor. J. B. Kniest, overlooked state, it hasn't been anything bigger than shovel in coal and keep up steam. Mr. cab to the rear and has nothing to do but Cox sees to the running of the locomotive twenty pages and a cover, and there's joy at the head end and communicates with to the reader on every page! Long, long the fireman by means of whistle signals. years from now this special will be dug up The car is lit throughout by electricity generated from a dynamo located in the engine cab. Even the headlight is so provided. Superintendent Calvert has been making a thorough inspection of the Burlington system. He went over the entire outhern system and last week went as far week Mr. Cox is taking his distinguished guest over the Denver branch. This inspection car wasbuilt at Havelock and is the only one of the kind in this country. It is a little palace on wheels.

Death of Engineer Freeland.

After several days of anxious waiting and with a hope that filled the hearts of hundreds of friends, that was only to be blasted, Engineer Robert Freeland who together with his fireman, D. B. Aultz. was fatally scalded in his engine at Edgemont a week ago last Sunday, died at the sisters' hospital in Deadwood Wednesday morning, where he was taken after the ac-cident. Mr. Freeland showed indications of rapid recovery from his severe scalds and just as his friends were rejoicing that his life would be spared, word came from The HERALD will give furthur surrounded by his wife and children also particulars of this happy event in next his brother, Dr. J. In the death of this man the people of Uliance realize that a noble life has passed ing of the heartstrings not only of his good wife and the little ones he loved so Sam, in company with Mr. Stone went out well but to every one who knew him yet, to the C. C. Joy ranch, northeast of this there is something so grand in the life he led that we cannot but repeat the old say ing. Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the kingdom of thy Lord. Surely he who loved his little family with all the tenderness of his good heart will in return receive the same consideration from his Creator who never forsakes those of his flock. While in a worldly way, the home has been made desolate through this unfortunate accident, let it be remembered by the wife and children that he has left them a legacy in his honorable character that will be to them as a beacon light in this vale of tears as they journey on to that mysterious realm, that far-off home to which he was member whose life will be a fit example to follow. Clean, honorable, and as bright as the noonday sun. Let them remember that though dead to this world his career spend a year with her sister.
