TRAVELING IN INDIA.

One Must Hire a Native Servant or Endure Endless Trouble.

Every one who goes to India to travel or live at hotels, says the Chicago Record-Herald, must have a personal servant, a native who performs the duties of valet, waiter and errand boy and whatever else may be required of him. This is a fixed custom of the country, to resist which brings endless trouble to the traveler.

Many of the Indian hotels expect the guests to bring all their own servants, both chambermaids and waiters, and are consequently so short handed that the traveler who comes without them has usually to wait upon himself.

On the railways a native servant is quite indispensable, for travelers are required to carry their own bedding, make their own beds and furnish their own tables. The company provides a bench to sleep on similar to those in American freight cabooses.

Each car has also a washroom and sometimes water. But if the traveler wishes to be sure of washing his face in the morning and if he is wise he will send his servant to the station master before the train starts and ask to have the water tank filled. Then a Hindoo with a goatskin full of water will climb to the roof of the car and fill it and, having descended, will stand before the door and touch his forehead every time the traveler looks toward him till he receives a penny.

At the eating houses along the road the servant will have to raid the tables and shelves for food and bring it to the car for his master, since no waiters are provided. In addition he will hire baggage carriers and will attend to all the details of catching trains and engaging rooms.

A good servant can be hired for $15 a month. Poorer "servants," as they are called, can be employed for $2 or $3 a month and even to "find" themselves, but the traveler must pay railway fare for them.

THE BOOKS THEY READ.

Cowper read only his Bible and his prayer book.

Chopin rarely read anything heavier than a French novel.

Voltaire's favorite classical author was Juvenal, the satirist.

Rossini for nearly thirty years read nothing but French novels.

Jean Paul Richter had only five or six books, all philosophical.

Lord Clive said that "Robinson Crusoe" beat any other book he ever read.

Franklin read all he could find relating to political economy and finance.

Michael Angelo was fondest of the books of Moses and the psalms of David.

Bach was no great reader, but much enjoyed books of jokes and funny stories.

"THERE is so much good in the worst of us,
 And there is so much bad in the best of us,
 That it won't do for any of us to talk about the rest of us."

But each should do his best to improve the standard of the Goods he offers for sale to the Public.

Advancement along this line is our aim.
