THE FLEET SAILS

GOES ON ITS LONG VOYAGE TO THE FAR EAST.

THE SHIPS IN THE SQUADRON

Four Cruisers and Several Torpedo Boats and Destroyers—To Be Joined Later at Liban by Twelve Transports.

CRONSTADT—The Baltic fleet sailed Sunday for the far east. The vessels of the fleet are the battleships Souvaroff, Vice Admiral Rojstvensky's flagship; the Navarin, Sissoi, Valiky, Borodino, Alexander III, Orel Oleg and the Ostliabla, Rear Admiral Voelkersam's flagship; the cruisers Admiral Nakhimoff, Dmitri Donskoi, Aurora and the Almaz, Rear Admiral Enquist's flagship, and several torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers.

The fleet will merely touch at Liban, where it will be joined by twelve transports, colliers and supply ships, already waiting there, and will then proceed direct to the orient.

The scene on the departure of the fleet was an imposing one. At dawn the first anchor was hoisted on the swift cruiser Aurora, which, accompanied by two torpedo boats, slipped out of the harbor. The town was awakened by the booming of the guns of the forts as the Aurora sped towards Liban in advance of the main squadron.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the time set for the departure of the remainder of the fleet, the imperial yacht, with the emperor, Grand Duke Alexia, the high admiral and other naval officers on board, put out from Peterhof, on the other side of the bay, with an escort of three torpedo boats. Admirals Rojstvensky, Voelkersam and Enquist went on board the imperial yacht and personally said farewell to the emperor.

Then, with the destroyers ahead and abeam, the Souvaroff led the squadron down the Finnish gulf. The water front and the piers and forts were crowded with spectators. The ensigns on the forts and yachts were dipped and the guns of each chain of forts across the bay joined in an admiral's salute, while from the signal masts above the forts fluttered a string of colored flags reading: "Good luck to the Baltic fleet on its long voyage."

FINDS A VOLUNTEER FLEET.

Orders of Russian Government Communicated.

ZANZIBAR, Island of Zanzibar—The British cruiser Forte early this morning found the British volunteer fleet steamers, St. Petersburg and Smolensk, within the three-mile limit and communicated to them the orders of the Russian government to desist from interference with neutral shipping. The commanders of the Russian vessels said they would forthwith proceed to Europe.

A report was brought in yesterday by the German steamer Krimprinz that the St. Petersburg and Smolensk were coaling in territorial waters. The Forte immediately proceeded to search for them, and eventually found the Russian vessels. They were not coaling, but after the orders of the Russian government had been delivered to them the Sholensk and St. Petersburg joined a German collier and proceeded to Dar-Es-Salaam, on the African coast, twenty-five miles south of Zanzibar.

SAFE AT MUKDEN

RUSSIAN ARMY DODGES THE JAPANESE.

RETREAT WITHOUT FIGHTING

Terrible Experience While on the Forced March Floundering Through the Mud Along the Mandarin Road—Hospitals Taxed by the Wounded.

ST. PETERSBURG—It seems to be definitely established that Field Marshal Oyama's tired troops abandoned on Wednesday the attempt to head off General Kuropatkin, whose army has arrived safely at Mukden after frightful experiences in floundering through mud and mire over the Mandarin road.

Some descriptions of the scenes along the line of retreat are almost incredible. They tell how the men lay down in the mud and slept in a drenching rain.

It is evident that the last determined effort of the Japanese to bring Kuropatkin to bay was made on Tuesday, but the Russian commander-in-chief faced about and two corps with artillery beat off the Japanese, while the remainder of the troops continued the march to Mukden. After that the Japanese could only hang on to the flanks and try to shell the retreating columns from the hills.

Th outposts are still in contact, but they are not even exchanging shots. A late Associated Press dispatch from Mukden describes the horrible plight of the tentless and shelterless soldiers.

The detailed statement of the Russian losses, which it is promised will be issued on Saturday, is awaited with intense interest. The general expectation is that the losses will approximate 20,000, as against 30,000 for the Japanese.

The work of burying the dead was left for the Japanese, who were forced to attempt the task as a matter of self preservation, but it was an impossible undertaking. The awful rains have handicapped the work of cremation, on which the Japanese relied, and only shallow trench burials were possible in most cases. Not only is such burial one of great difficulty, but it is almost valueless from a sanitary point of view, the storms undermining soon after it is accomplished.

The care of the wounded has taxed the hospitals to the utmost. One correspondent says that 12,000 wounded have passed through the Mukden hospitals up to Sunday and only the most severe cases could be attended by the nurses and surgeons. Many therefore had to be left to the rough, but well-meant care of their comrades.

Now that the battle of Liao Yang is history officers of the general staff are more disposed to discuss some of the phases of the fight, but they still lack specific information, making it impossible to speak on many points.

General Kuropatkin's army at Liao Yang consisted of twenty battalions of infantry, 147 squadrons of cavalry and 700 guns, approximately 108,000 bayonets, 15,000 sabers and 10,000 gunners. Portions of two European corps and one Siberian corps had been left at Mukden and a number of these were brought into the fight.

The size of the Japanese army has not been definitely established, but its actual fighting force is supposed to have had a superiority in numbers of from 50,000 to 60,000 men and a considerable superiority in artillery.

One of the chief advantages possessed by Field Marshal Oyama, according to Russian experts, consisted in the greater elasticity in movements.

JAPANESE INSPECT THE NOVIK

Find Russian Vessel Sunk Within Six Hundred Yards of the Shore.

TOKIO—The officers commanding the Japanese expedition sent in to examine the wreck of the Russian cruiser Novik report that it is beached 900 yards southwest of Korsakovsk lighthouse. It has a 30-degree list to starboard, and with the exception of a small portion of its bow it is entirely submerged. Even on its upper deck the water is knee deep in the most shallow places. Its conning tower and upper works were heavily damaged by the Japanese shell fire. It is impossible to ascertain definitely the extent of the damage under the water, but evidently it is considerable.

Russian land forces fired on the Japanese expedition while the examination was being made, but the expedition retired without sustaining any casualties.

Slagel, alias Robert Romaine, a deported Colorado miner under arrest here for burglary, has confessed to the county attorney to complicity in the Independence depot and the Vindicator mine explosions in the Cripple Creek district last June by which fifteen non-union miners were killed outright and others injured. Romaine says he helped to place the dynamite and wires running beneath the depot and by which the charge was set off with such disastrous results.

NEWS IN NEBRASKA

CONVICTS IN GREY CLOTH.

Warden Beemer Rewards Good Prisoners.

LINCOLN—Warden Beemer is rapidly inaugurating a change in the uniform of the convicts in the Nebraska penitentiary. The average number of the prisoner there is nothing to gush was 323. Warden Beemer reports that 150 have been given the new uniform. This consists of cloth of a solid black and white stripes. The number of the convict wearing the new uniform is fastened to the inside of his coat out of sight. When the warden asks for a man's number the prisoner pulls back the right side of his coat and exposes the figures. The coat is then dropped to its rightful position and from the appearance of the prisoner there is nothing to suggest that he is a convict. Warden Beemer does not give the new uniform to all who come to his doors. Each prisoner must wear stripes for six months. If his sentence is six months he will never wear anything but stripes while he is in the penitentiary. After six months, if a prisoner shows a disposition to obey all rules of the prison he has the right to don a grey uniform. He is also given two soft white shirts. Usually each prisoner removes his outside white shirt when he goes to work. The warden believes the men are well pleased with the change in dress. He declines, however, to abolish the lockstep. He says very few prisoners have abolished it, and he is of the opinion that it is retained solely because the men move much more rapidly in the lockstep movement than in any other way. He says they would have to be trained to keep the proper distance, the same as soldiers are trained, or they would lag and straggle while in line. He believes he can move 1,000 men in the lockstep more quickly than he can 300 without the lockstep. Warden Beemer believes the opposition to the lockstep is founded mostly on sentiment rather than on any practical reason. About 200 yards of the old striped cloth still remains in the warden's tailor shop, but he believes it will be used to clothe men serving their first six months.

Of the 323 convicts in the prison during the month of August, 185 were employed by the Lee Broom and Duster company, the only firm that holds a contract for convict labor. During August ten were received and one was returned from the asylum. Twelve were discharged by reason of expiration of service, five were paroled and one was remanded by the supreme court, leaving the count 320 at the end of the month. 4

The details and the names of the men are supposed to be known by the authorities with authenticity enough to warrant court martial proceedings.
