LONG AND SHORT STORIES.

Some Pointers Letter Writers Will Do Well to Remember.

Sherwin Cody in his "Training Course in Correct English, Business Correspondence and Advertisment Writing," lays down some rules as to the length of business letters. He

They chreabout the hills and plains for a most. While they lost flesh, their stomachs improved and they even learned to eat five or six kinds of breakfast food, "Get a pedometer and walk" was the advice to rolling stock. they gave upon returning. Within two days every pedemeter in town was bought up. Statesmen may be seen rushing about as though engaged in a six-day walking match. In order to get the full beneat of the new "cure" each lawmaker must walk at least thirty-five miles a week-ten miles on Sunday and the other twenty-five during the other six days.

Relative Security. One tale is told of an interview a Chicago man named Lyon had with Lyman J. Gage when the former secretary of the treasury was cashier of the First National bank. Mr. Lyon was pushed for cash, and a note for a large sum indorsed by him was held by that institution. Mr. Gage suggested that it be taken up. Mr. Lyon intimated that it would be rather difficult for him to find the money at the Phones-Office 214. Res 205 time. "I know of one case," replied a man who had been reading his newspaper with seeming interest.

"Then let us hear it." "It was the case of my own father, who was a plumber. He invested $17,-000,000 in a steamboat line and during a hurricane every single craft in the line went to the bottom. He died a year later and he didn't have money enough to pay the undertaker's bill."

Beautiful Yellowstone Park.

We have received from the Burlington passenger department a very handsome leaflet describing the new hunting and fishing region between Cody and Yellowstone Park along the Shoshone river. The folder describes the two og cabin inns built along the way by how to get into the country via Cody without the use of the Moyer line. and announces practically half rates for the round trip every day to Cody in regard to this wonderful new region health. They left for Indianola Friday. can be obtained of the Burlington agent;
