BRYAN THE NOMINEE

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

The Pride of Democracy Selected as Standard Bearer Amid Tremendous Cheering and Applause.

(Special Dispatch to the Alliance Herald.)

Convention Hall, Denver, Colo., Friday morning, 3:05 o'clock—W. J. Bryan nominated at 3:05 a. m., amid tremendous applause. The names of Johnson of Minnesota and Gray of Delaware also presented. At conclusion of first ballot the nomination of Bryan was made unanimous amid intense cheering. Delegates went wild in their enthusiasm. Delegates arose and marched about the hall with bands playing and flags waving. A storm of applause arose from the galleries and for more than an hour wild disorder reigned. Chairman Clayton vainly rapped for order, but the sound of the gavel a foot away. Convention adjourned till afternoon.

DENVER'S BIG TRIUMPH.

(By W. C. Heelan.)

Denver, July 7, 1908.

Western hospitality is exemplified in its truest sense by the citizens of Denver in the treatment and reception accorded visitors to the Democratic national convention. The visitor to Denver alighting from the train beholds a fairyland of artistic decorations and the glad hand of friendship and good fellowship is extended with that camaraderie that leaves no doubt in the visitor's mind that the "Welcome" arch means no other than what it proclaims. The crowd is enormous, in fact the largest that has ever been in the metropolis of the west. The various committees see to it that delegates and their friends secure sleeping accommodations and the hotels and restaurants are tending to the gustatory pleasures of the visitors.

The parks and places of attractions are crowded both night and day to their utmost capacity. Sight-seeing cars and vehicles are filled with people viewing the beauties of far-famed Denver.

There is but one name in the hotel corridors and on the streets that the people consider as the choice of the delegates and that, of course, is Nebraska's son, W. J. Bryan. The Minnesota delegation is pulling hard for Johnson but there is but little hope of stemming the Bryan tidal wave. Eastern delegates, with their silk hats and suave ways, lift their voices with one accord in harmony with the vociferous shouts of the delegates from the southland and Pacific slope for the great Commoner from Nebraska.

Box Butte county has been pretty much in evidence on the streets, but as your correspondent has not a list of the names he will wait until after the convention to give them the notice which their loyalty to Nebraska's pride warrants, for they are all for Bryan.

We wish to say, however, that one of the Box Butte party earned a local fame here by reason of his standing four solid hours in front of one of the leading dry goods stores and viewing without winking an eyelash the beautiful young lady who is demonstrating the new directoire gowns from Paris. The gentleman—Mr. Dick Burke—says the time was well spent and full value received for every minute of his ocular entertainment.
