

School Graduates Will Banquet.

Opening of the City Schools.

The city schools, all excepting the high school, will open Monday morning, Sept. 7th. Daily programs, lesson assignments, and complete plans for the first day's work will be made out in advance so that classes will be organized and regular work will be done from the beginning of the first day.

Examinations will be conducted the first two days of school for those who were absent from the final examinations at the close of last year, or who were required to make up work during the summer.

No other examinations for promotion will be given after the first two days.

All pupils having books belonging to the district are requested to return them to the superintendent's office on Saturday, Sept. 5th, between nine and ten o'clock a.m.

There will be a meeting of the city teachers at the Central schools Saturday, Sept. 5th, at 3 p.m.

The boundary line between the Emerson schools and the Central schools is as follows: Beginning at the railroad on the alley west of Box Butte avenue, running north along said alley to Oregon street, thence west two blocks to the alley between Big Horn and Cheyenne avenues, thence north to city limits.

All pupils east of this boundary line will attend the Central school; also those in the 7th and 8th grades west of this line.

All pupils below the 6th grade, inclusive, who are west of this line, will attend the Emerson schools.

Pupils who are in the district, but outside the city limits will attend the school that is most convenient.

High school begins Sept. 21st, two weeks later than the rest of the schools. Following is a list of the teachers of the city schools:

Theodore Lorch's Pleasing Play.

"The Lieutenant and the Cowboy," under the direction of Mr. Theodore Lorch, the popular western actor who has won the friendship and good will of Alliance theatre goers, was presented in this city last Friday night to a good sized audience. The cast is a purely western type and the action of the drama is supposed to find its origin at Ft. Garland, the old Colorado military post. The Lieutenant, as acted by Mr. Jas. L. Harrington, illustrates the typical army officer, both dignified and officious, who is in love with Col. Faulkner's daughter, impersonated most realistically by Miss Lorraine Keene, as the accomplished, refined college girl from the east on a visit to the military post. The plot entails the holding up of a stage coach on which the young lady was a passenger. In the hold-up outfit is one Bud Larrabee, a typical cow boy of the early days, who is both cool, fearless and rather handsome, but only a wild child of nature with no education or refinement other than that of natural instinct. Edith Faulkner is engaged to Lieutenant Corbin, but Larrabee's genial manners and manly bearing appeal more to her liking and in the course of time she falls in love with him though engaged to the lieutenant, who is caught entangled in a number of shady transactions that finally come to light. While the cowboy has been mixed up with several deals of a western hold-up nature, he proves a true friend on all occasions. This the lieutenant does not. Bud is apprised of falling heir to valuable mining land and goes to Victor to look up his legacy and also does Colonel Faulkner a favor on the same trip. Lieutenant Corbin has trouble with Lieutenant Leonard Faulkner, the Colonel's son, who draws a gun and inflicts a severe flesh wound in his advisory. Corbin is taken to the hospital, but suddenly makes his escape and is never heard from again, and the concluding act proves the usual result of the lady's choice in marriage to Bud Larrabee, the man of her heart. Mr. Theodore Lorch as Bud Larrabee is a true conception of the western cowboy. The make-up was perfect and the personal characteristics of a western citizen was brought out in all its natural manner. Cool and fearless, with clear eye and steady nerve, this character is most interesting in the personal acting of Mr. Lorch, who leaves nothing to be desired in the leading part of the play. Then too, the support of this popular actor is well selected and strong all the way through.

It can be safely said that Mr. Lorch has not only sustained his popularity with his many friends in this city, but on this occasion added new laurels to his list of admirers.
