

Large Attendance at Fleharty Meeting

Fully three hundred people attended the speech delivered by Hon. Harry B. Fleharty, of South Omaha, at the opera house last Tuesday evening. Mr. Fleharty, who is the democratic candidate for attorney general of Nebraska, is a fluent and impressive speaker. No sooner had the chairman, Robert Graham, introduced the gifted orator when he entered into the issues of the campaign in language so plain and instructive that every one was able to understand the attitude of the platform of the principal parties that today ask the votes of the people of the United States. That Mr. Fleharty struck the popular cord of his audience was evident from the vociferous applause accorded him many times during the course of his speech.

In dealing with the tariff question he read both planks of the republican and democratic parties and by strange coincidence they resembled each other so closely that it almost challenged his hearers to distinguish which one was republican and the other democratic. Four years ago, the speaker declared, a plank of that kind would not be tolerated in the republican platform and he cited ex-Secretary of the Treasury, Shaw, as his authority, who said that tariff reform was not at all practical. But today, thank God, the people who have been paying tribute to the trust mammon, are resenting the greed of the monster and demand deliverance from their shackles. Mr. Fleharty held up his Waltham watch which, in this country, costs $62.00 that today is sold in foreign countries for some $40.00, thus illustrating this one instance in hundreds of others where the workingman was robbed in this fair land of the free. But the protection had not only robbed the people but it caused a trust to be formed in watch-making that reduced the number of factories in the United States from some twenty odd to eighteen. Is this helping the industrial class? And this was the case with thousands of other industries which today are controlled by combinations.

Moses P. Kinkaid, the candidate for congress in the sixth district, was considered by Mr. Fleharty in his address and he referred to the O'Neill statesman in bitter terms for the record his party had made and in which he as a member of the lower house was responsible. In speaking of Judge Taft, the speaker refrained from all personal illusions whatsoever. But the official career of the candidate for president on the republican ticket was held up in his own record as an enemy of organized labor and his record as judge was such that to elect him president would be a dangerous menace to unionism in all its branches. Mr. Taft had repeatedly shown his partisan feeling towards organized labor and in one case Mr. Fleharty proved his contempt for a striker by sentencing him to a term of six months in jail without giving defendant a trial by jury. The speaker has been attorney for organized labor in South Omaha on several occasions and is thoroughly familiar with the tactics of those who would break up organized unions of all kinds for the protection of the men who do the work.

In referring to guaranteed bank deposits, which has become an important issue in the present campaign, as a result of the financial panic that swept over the whole country last fall and even yet has not relaxed its grip, the speaker said that had such a disaster happened under democratic administration it would have been pronounced a "panic" but owing to the fact that a republican administration was responsible it was considered only a "slight financial embarrassment". But no remedy is offered for the present condition by the republican platform and Mr. Taft in his speech at Cincinnati declared that such a thing as guaranteed deposits was a theory that was not practical. Mr. Fleharty noted the fact that such security was practical in the protection of municipal, county and state bonds and why should not the individual be similarly protected. In Oklahoma, where this law prevails among the state banks, it is declared very popular with all concerned. But to offset this popular plan in the democratic platform, the republicans again refer to the postal savings bank proposition that has so often been introduced in congress only to be pigeon-holed and forgotten. So much for the republican party's efforts reform in our banking system.

In concluding his speech, Mr. Fleharty paid a beautiful tribute to Mr. Bryan, a conspicuous photograph of whom adorned the stage. He told of the Commoner's untiring zeal for democracy and the high esteem in which he was held by all nations which fact was attested on his memorial trip around the world when his counsel was invoked and his governmental ideas carefully considered. Mr. Bryan went as a common citizen of the United States, not bolstered by official influence or prestige, yet he was the admiration of every nation.

Mr. Roosevelt too was spoken of in terms that gave great credit to the president. He was as a great torch that illuminated the world and in the glare of which the insidious and dishonest dealings of the trusts and Wall Street thieves were laid bare. But while Theodore Roosevelt is the great illuminator he is tied by a party that is today controlled and shackled by the tentacles of the octopus which today is sapping the life blood of the nation. It will require another David to slay the Goliath of modern times.

Baschky-Rowland Nuptials.

Married, at Holy Rosary church, October 7, at 7 o'clock a.m., Father McNamara officiating, Miss Anna Regina Rowland and Mr. Louis A. Baschky. Miss Agnes Rowland, sister of the bride, and Joseph Baschky, brother of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and groomsmen.

After the ceremony, the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's brothers at 424 Big Horn avenue where a bountiful wedding breakfast was served to relatives and intimate friends.

The bride was gowned in a grey traveling suit, and the bridesmaid in a blue tailored suit. The bride has lived in Alliance nearly a year and has made many friends during her short stay. The groom has lived in and near Alliance for a number of years where he is well and favorably known and is an employe as a fireman out he B. & M.

The young couple were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents which goes to show the high esteem in which they were held by their friends. They left this morning for an extended trip to Lincoln, Denver and other Colorado points, and will be at home after October 20th at 724 Big Horn avenue.

The out of town guests were Mrs. August Baschky and son, Joe, mother and brother of the groom, Miss Grace LeBar and C. W. Miller, all of Crawford, and P. F. Rowland, a brother of the bride, of Marsland.

It's Up to the Voter.

The republican national convention by an overwhelming majority repudiated the most important measures advocated by President Roosevelt. Should Secretary Taft be elected his election would be regarded as an endorsement of the convention's repudiation of those measures. The enemies of those measures could then well say that since the voters had ratified their repudiation they should not be enacted into laws. In short, Taft's election would be turned into an excuse for calling a halt in the reforms which President Roosevelt has inaugurated and carried forward as far as the leaders of his party in congress would permit. Taft, although Roosevelt's understudy and protege, is pre-eminent a standpatter. He is supported by standpatters, and his strongest supporters are those who have most bitterly and successfully opposed Roosevelt.

Those measures were not mentioned in the republican platform four years ago. That gave a republican congress an excuse for ignoring President Roosevelt's desire to see them enacted into laws. What will be the fate of those measures after their repudiation is sanctioned by the voters, with a congress opposed and a president, like Taft, indifferent to them?
