Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN H. SMITH

THE CAPITAL I.

Hast met in your travels
The capital I.
Attached to a person
In ample supply.
Who talked of his prowess
On sea and on land
At any old moment
A victim would stand?
It's I was a this, sir,
And I was a that;
It's I caught a tiger
Or I killed a cat;
It's I led the army
Or I chased the fleet;
It's I every moment,
And I with both feet.
Alone, single handed,
He runs the parade,
Has thrilling adventures
At hand, ready made,
The spotlight attraction,
The one certain bet.
Admired of the ladies,
Their pride and their pet.
It's I swam the river,
And I won the race;
It's I licked the bully,
And I set the pace;
It's I was the hero,
Retiring and shy;
It's I, the great, only
And wonderful I.

Domestic Jag.

"Awful the way Childs is acting."
"What is he doing now?"
"Look at him. He drank three ginger ales in rapid succession."
"He is just trying to get up nerve enough to discharge the cook."

Pity 'Tis.

"Queer."
"What's queer?"
"We are told that the love of money is the root of evil."
"Nothing queer about that."
"But I was just thinking—"
"Now, that is queer."
"That the love of evil is the root of a lot of money."

Superfluous.

"Going to take the course in oratory?"
"No, I think not."
"Wouldn't it come useful to you?"
"I hardly see how. I never expect to make my living selling fish."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some men take such a pride in their meekness that they are positively domineering in their conceit about it.

NEXT TIME FACE FORWARD

When a man gets a swelled head just leave him to his fate. He is inviting a remedy that will sooner or later accept the invitation.

A handsome man isn't so partial to beautiful women. In fact, he would rather have a woman not particularly noticeable for her looks, desiring a corner on the admiration market.

There is lots of common sense lying around loose and unemployed, but it is so unattractive that many people hesitate about using it.

When truth is stretched until it snaps and flies back the recoil is sometimes unsettling.

Some people watch and pray; others watch and prey—when copper on the beat isn't.

A homely woman is dead wise to the alleged fact that beauty and brains are never found occupying the same cranium.

An octopus is a savage and frightful monster that a great many people have strange yearnings to become.

The man who has push and a pull in addition must be as contrary as a government mule if he doesn't get on.

SHAKESPEAREAN PARTS.

That of Hamlet Is the Longest of Them All.

The longest part in any Shakespearean play is Hamlet, who is before the audience almost constantly. Hamlet is a constant talker, and it is surprising that in the circumstances he says so many wise things. He has to his share 1,569 lines. Richard III. is another long part, as the character speaks 1,161 lines, next comes Iago, with 1,117 lines. Henry V. has 1,063 lines.

One would suppose from seeing the representation or from looking over the play that Othello had more lines than Iago, but it is not the case, for the valiant Moor has only 888 lines. Coriolanus has 886, the duke in "Measure For Measure" 880 and Timon 883. Antony in "Antony and Cleopatra" does not seem a very long part, judging by the appearance of the prompt book; but in reality he has 830 lines.

Brutus in "Julius Caesar" has 727, Falstaff in "Henry V." 719. Macbeth appears a long part, judging from how much he is on the stage in the representation, but in fact he has only 705 lines. Romeo has 618, which is only a few more than the king in "Hamlet," who has 551. Cassius in "Julius Caesar," although a first class part, has but 507 lines.

The female parts in Shakespeare's plays are not very long. The actress who plays Portia has 589 lines to study. Rosalind has 749. Cleopatra has 670 and Juliet 541. Desdemona has only 389. Beatrice has 309. Only twenty of Shakespeare's women have more than 300 lines each, and some of the most famous of the great bard's feminine creations have comparatively little to say. Cordelia in "King Lear" has only 115 lines. Kate in "Taming of the Shrew," although so conspicuous and voluble, has but 229, while Lady Macbeth has but 211.

Insane Sense.

Among the inmates of a certain insane asylum were two who were considered perfectly harmless and not without a certain modicum of common sense. These two were generally employed in the garden and were frequently left without supervision.

An opportunity offering, they planned between themselves an attempt to escape.

"Now, bend down, Tom," said Jack as the two conspirators came to the wall surrounding the grounds; "then I'll climb up your shoulder to the top, and when I'm up I'll be able to give you a hand."

Tom accordingly bent down, and Jack, with a little difficulty, managed to gain the top of the wall, where, instead of assisting his friend, he disappeared on the other side and as he was making off shouted:

"Well, I think, Jack, you'll be better to stay on another fortnight yet. You're not nearly cured."

It Met Requirements.

Charles Hoyt, the farce writer, once invited a friend to go to the theater with him.

"What play?" queried his friend.
"Mr. Blank in 'Nathan Hale,'" said the playwright, naming a very popular actor.

"I'm very sorry," said the friend, "but you'll have to count me out."

"What's the matter?" asked Hoyt in surprise.

"Well, to be frank with you, I don't like Blank in anything. I hate him personally and can't enjoy him as an actor, and as far as I am concerned, I wouldn't mind seeing him dead."

"Then this is your play," slyly added Mr. Hoyt in his peculiar Yankee dialect. "You don't want to miss it. They hang him in the last act."

An Oversight.

The poet Landor was at the same time the most violent and brutal and most delicate and sensitive of men. He admired flowers. The gardens of his beautiful villa at Florence were full of flowers, and the poet walked among them daily, never plucking them, only bending over them reverently to admire their loveliness and their perfume. His cook one day served him a wretched dinner, and in his rage the poet threw the man out of the window into a bed of splendid roses. As the cook writhed with a broken leg below, Landor from his window exclaimed in a horror stricken voice, "Good gracious, I forgot the roses!"

Why He Thought So.

"Auntie," inquired the little nephew as the unbecoming spinster stood gazing in the long mirror, "what are you thinking of?"
"I was thinking how my figure looks in the glass, Willie."

"I thought that was it!" quickly exclaimed the youth.

"What made you think so?" asked the aunt, her curiosity getting the better of her.

"Because you made such a wry face."—Bohemian Magazine.
