32,000 Farmers and Their Families Read the Nebraska Farmer Every Week.

But that isn't half enough.
I am determined to put the Nebraska Farmer into every farm home in Nebraska.
This accounts for the marvelous offer which I make, herewith.
Read every word of what I say below.

S. R. McKelvie
PUBLISHER NEBRASKA FARMER.

A Few Plain Words About Farm Papers

That class of farm papers which treat reliably of farm topics, including social and political problems as they affect the farmer, are doing more in behalf of the reliable, progressive farmer than any other one educational factor.

These papers deserve the support of the farmer and should be read without stint in every rural home.

On the other hand it must be admitted that the farm newspaper field is flooded with a lot of so-called publications that are published with an eye single to the procuring of advertising.

Those papers come unbidden into your home, you cannot get rid of them, they carry all kinds of unclean and unreliable advertising and they pollute the minds and thoughts of your children.

On behalf of the NEBRASKA FARMER, I may say as its publisher that we accept no unclean or unreliable advertising whatsoever.

I personally guarantee the reliability of every advertiser who uses the NEBRASKA FARMER.

We carry no patent medicine advertising whatsoever.

The NEBRASKA FARMER is a real farm paper. It was established in 1859. It has been doing good ever since. It is owned and published by real farmers, and should be read in every farm home in Nebraska. Sam McKelvie, president of the company, is a Nebraska pioneer and now owns and operates 3,500 acres of Nebraska land. For the last three years he has been called to do instructing in the live stock judging department of the University of Nebraska. Leonard S. Herron, editor of the NEBRASKA FARMER, was reared upon a Nebraska farm and completed a course in the Nebraska School of Agriculture as well as the Iowa Agricultural College. Professors and instructors in the Nebraska School of Agriculture are regular contributors. Dozens of letters every week by our readers constitute one of the most interesting features of the NEBRASKA FARMER.

The Nebraska Farmer Always Stops When the Time is Out Without a Word From the Subscriber.

A Great Series Of Nebraska Articles

Every true Nebraskan will want to read the series of articles on Nebraska farming being published in the NEBRASKA FARMER. As will be noted below this series of articles embraces all the important phases of agriculture, stock raising, horticulture, and kindred topics as related to Nebraska conditions. Each article is written by an eminent authority. When the articles will have been completed they will constitute the most comprehensive, complete, and authoritative work on the subject ever published. A book containing such a compendium of faultless information would sell readily at $2.00. Through the NEBRASKA FARMER you procure these articles at a very low cost, indeed.

Following is a list of the proposed articles and authors:

- "Geography, Climate and Mineral Resources," Prof. E. B. Condra, University of Nebraska.
- "Growing Alfalfa in the Platte Valley," N. C. Dunlap (farmer), Kearney.
- "Growing Alfalfa on Irrigated Soils," F. L. Young (farmer), Morrill.

The NEBRASKA FARMER Belongs to the Farmers of Nebraska

← This Is My Remarkable Offer:

The regular subscription price of the NEBRASKA FARMER is $1.00 per year in advance. But in order to introduce it into the many hundred Nebraska homes where it is not now read, I will make a trial offer of TEN WEEKS FOR 10 CENTS, AND I GUARANTEE TO STOP THE PAPER AT THE END OF THAT TIME UNLESS IT IS RENEWED. Furthermore, I have on hand, several hundred sets of "Language of Flowers" post cards. There are ten cards in a set, all printed in vividly beautiful natural colors on a gold background, and each card contains a verse of the language of the flower shown on the card. You know what post cards cost you when you buy them at your local store—usually two for five cents. Then figure the value of these on that same basis, and you will know what a remarkably wonderful offer I really am making when I say that I will send the NEBRASKA FARMER TEN WEEKS, AND GIVE A SET OF THESE BEAUTIFUL FLOWER POST CARDS ALL for 10c (stamps or silver). I want to emphasize right here that this set of post cards is different from any you ever saw. They are absolutely the latest and best. Accept this offer today by clipping the attached coupon and sending to me together with 10 cents in silver or stamps. I will be glad to send you a sample copy of the NEBRASKA FARMER if you will write and ask for it.
