OFFICE AT PHILLIPS' GROCERY

The following from the Omaha Trade Exhibit hits the nail on the head and contains some good advice: "One reason why you don't sell more goods to the people in your town's trade territory is because you don't make sufficient effort to get and retain their friendship, which is always the basis of the most profitable and the most satisfactory business. Don't stop at cordial invitations for the farmers to visit your store but get out and visit them. Organize a local trade excursion and have the business men make frequent little journeys in a body to boost the home market town. But if the other fellows are not live enough to accept the suggestion, then go it alone and boost your own business exclusively."

The Twentieth Century Farmer of June 22nd contains a very interesting article on "The Unappropriated Government Lands of Nebraska," by G. W. Hervev. The article contains very interesting contributions by A. M. Wilson, R. M. Hampton, C. H. Cornell, F. M. Walcott, E. E. Lowe, L. P. De Latour, J. H. Monahan, A. B. Persinger and Lewis Broth. There seems to be a variance of opinion just what to do with the government lands in western Nebraska.

The following is taken from "The Commoner." It is well worth reading. "The liquor interests often demand, with a show of righteous indignation, that they shall, as a matter of equity, be compensated for loss that may come to saloon property by the refusal of a license. They should remember the ancient rule that those who seek equity must do equity and enter a court of equity with clean hands. Do they compensate the mother when they drag her boy down to ruin? Do they compensate the wife when they destroy the earning capacity of her husband? Do they compensate the children whose lives are blighted by a father's dissipation? Do they compensate society when they convert wealth producers into paupers? Do they compensate the state when they blunt the sensibilities of citizens and make a drink more potent than an argument in securing votes?"

The man who profits by cultivating in others the appetite for strong drink ought to be the last one to insist upon recovering compensation for any loss that he may suffer because of the enforcement of laws enacted for the protection of society."

The following item taken from The Daily Inter-Mountain of Elkins, W. Va., dated June 20th, will be of interest to Alliance people: "District Superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. L. E. Resseger, was in the city over Sunday for the purpose of holding the Quarterly meeting. The Quarterly Conference was held Sunday afternoon, at which a movement was started to pay off the church debt, by appointing a committee to raise sufficient funds. It is hoped that the mortgage may be burned before the end of the present Conference year. Dr. Resseger also announced that Rev. Vallow, of Alliance, Nebraska, who has exchanged work with the present pastor, Rev. J. L. B. Jones, will be here about July 24 to take charge of the work.

The announcement that Dr. Jones will leave Elkins will be heard with genuine regret by the members of every church in the city as well as the entire membership of the Methodist Church. Dr. Jones is a preacher of exceptional power and doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to the church people of Alliance.
