USEFUL INVENTION

Geo. Hills received a telegram Tuesday morning from Washington, D. C., informing him that his invention is patentable. It is a breeching buckle designed to take the place of breeching stay and buckle shields, and is a very useful invention. It will lessen the expense somewhat in making that part of the harness and will also be more durable than the old style. The Herald is pleased to learn of George's success with this invention and hopes that it will be a money maker for him.

The Co-Operative is selling groceries the cheapest ever.
