ANOTHER GOOD SCHOOL YEAR

Commencement Exercises of St. Agnes Academy at Phelan Opera House, Next Wednesday Evening

GRADE PROGRAM FRIDAY NIGHT

Another year of successful school work at St. Agnes Academy is drawing to a close. The many friends of the school congratulate the Superior and her able assistants upon the success attained during the past year. Although it has been a hard year for some schools, this institution has made good progress in all departments.

The large photo cut of St. Agnes Academy building, on this page of The Herald, is a northeast view, and is now published for the first time. It is one of the several cuts appearing in their catalog of 1912, five hundred of which we are now printing. Any one wishing particulars regarding this institution will be fully informed by applying to the Superior for a catalog.

The increased attendance at the Academy during the past school year shows that the pupils of other years do not fail to recommend St. A. to their friends who wish to attend a boarding school. The enrollment is about three hundred, over one hundred of whom are boarders from different parts of Nebraska, Wyoming and South Dakota.

With some aid from the generous business men of Alliance the Academy now has a well equipped science department and hopes to have apparatus for physical culture in the near future.

The sisters in charge wish to thank the friends and patrons of the Academy for confidence and co-operation with them in the past and shall certainly do all in their power to make the work done at that institution worthy of the patronage of Alliance citizens as well as of neighboring communities.

An exhibit of fancy work, drawings, etc., made by the pupils will be held in the auditorium of Holy Rosary church on Saturday, p. m., and Sunday, June 15 and 16. The public, regardless of religious denomination, are kindly invited to come and view the work.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT
The Herald's Bulletin of Climate and Soil Conditions

Cool and cloudy Friday and Saturday, June 7 and 8. Light showers Sunday. Warm and clear most of the day Monday, with indications of rain.

Tuesday night a light rain fell at Alliance, but was much heavier southeast of the city.

The best rain of the season fell Wednesday morning, thoroughly soaking the ground over this part of the state.

The ground could probably not be in better condition for grass and farming than it is now. A good hay crop is assured. With favorable weather until harvest there will be a good crop of small grain, and with proper tillage there will no doubt be a good crop of potatoes and corn.

JUNIOR NORMAL NOTES

(By "The Outcast")

Enrollment to date 143. Hurry up students and make up the other 7—and then some! A list of students' names will be given next week.

A most successful and enjoyable Institute week closed last Friday evening with an inspiring talk by Dean Rouse of Peru, on "The Rewards of a Teacher".

Contrary to the possible expectation of some that such a subject must necessarily take but a short time to tell of, Mr. Rouse filled the allotted time with matter of absorbing interest, just as he did his twice-a-day talks during the week to teachers, on School Management and other vital topics.

On Monday of this week our popular and energetic leader of athletics, Mr. Walton, "opened" or "led off the ball" (as they used to say in the days when dancing was an innocent amusement, ofttime indulged in on the village green), with a rousing game of indoor baseball in the gym. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday are to be the boys' days, and Tuesday and Thursday for the girls. The latter include several sturdy athletes of prowess and renown, such as any young man of a timid disposition would be glad of as a companion when going home of a dark night!

The lecture by Dean Rouse on Friday night was well attended, and several pleasing musical items were rendered in addition.

We are indebted to the ladies and gentlemen who have every day favored us at the chapel hour, soothing and ravishing our souls with music, both vocal and instrumental.

The usual pleasantries of course will pass at times on the rostrum in chapel, but somehow up to the present the supply of anecdotes seems to have fallen below the average. Prof. Reimund did follow Prof. Marrs, it is true, with an opening speech in which he accused the latter gentleman of "marring" his talk by anticipating some of his intended remarks, but Prof. Marrs (possibly, being new to Alliance) neglected to make the obvious retort that both rhyme and (Reimund) reason were absent from any such excuse for a poor speech.

We have been visited by the pastors of all the churches except the Baptist, who for some reason was not able as yet to favor us. Come again friends. We need you and you need us.

By the way, "there is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard"; you know; and we almost think some of our beloved and respected supervisors need to be reminded of this. It is a long way from the platform to the rear of the assembly hall and sometimes one gets the impression that one is missing the details of the recital of the "late" virtues of some lamented friend whose name we can't quite catch! Don't take this unkindly, friends, but remember that we hang upon your words—and use a megaphone if necessary!

There seems to be still a little adjusting to be done before everyone is satisfactorily seated in the assembly room and it is suggested that something similar to the following notice might be posted: "The seats in this room are for the use of the ladies! Gentlemen are requested to not occupy them until the former are all seated!"

Altogether we are falling into our stride quite rapidly and look forward to another seven weeks or so of strenuous work and play, joyful achievement and wholesome pleasure; with every confidence in the Powers above, in our dear friends old and new, and yet to be, and incidentally in our humble selves.

OPENING AT THE DRAKE

A Bigger Affair Than had Been Anticipated by New Management

The new proprietors of The Drake Hotel, H. A. Bowman & Son, and their assistants had expected a good patronage, but the attendance at the opening last Sunday was larger than had been anticipated. An exact count of the number of dinners served was not kept, but it amounted to upwards of one hundred and fifty. The proprietors regret very much that those who came last could not be given as good service as the first, owing to the unexpected large number.

Some marked improvements have been made under the new management, and it is very encouraging to them that these improvements are already appreciated. They are determined to make The Drake a little better than any other hotel in this part of the west, and indications now point to a patronage sufficient to justify them in their undertaking.
