The Truth about Selling Stoves

You only buy a stove once or twice in a lifetime. You should know what you are buying if you expect this stove to last and give permanent satisfaction. Knowledge of stove values is too expensive to be acquired AFTER you've purchased at an exorbitant price from a peddler whose only object is to place the stove in your home and get his "fat" commission.

The peddler's way of selling stoves is necessarily more expensive than that of your home dealer. He pays hotel bills, traveling expenses, buys horse feed, wagon upkeep, etc. He gets BIG commissions--bigger in fact than the profit of the home dealer. You pay for this when buying of him.

The peddler doesn't care for anything except to sell his stove. Misrepresentations mean nothing to him. He never expects and seldom does make good his promises. When his stove fails to give the satisfaction he so glibly promised, your recourse, if any you have, is hundreds of miles away--inconvenient and expensive.

Why the Home Dealer's Way is Best

There are no secrets in stovemaking. One stove isn't as good as another. A cheaply made stove is cheap. A good stove isn't. The price isn't always a safe indication. But, dollar for dollar, your home dealers' stoves are best. They're made by reputable and honest manufacturers. The double guarantee--maker's and seller's--means something--it protects you. We can and do undersell the peddler. We actually give greater and more lasting values for less money. We are here day after day, month after month, year after year--and we will make our guarantees good.

If you need or expect to buy a stove or range soon, it's to your advantage to have us prove the truth of this ad--you'll see our lines of stoves--examine them carefully--get our prices--our terms--all better than the peddlers'. It's your business to buy where you get the best values--the most for your money. We are confident we can give you this. We feel certain that you would rather buy of us, if we can prove these facts, and we can if you'll put it up to us. We urge you to do this. Will you? Right now?

We Have Stoves and Ranges of all Sizes and Prices, from the Cheapest that's Good to the Best that's Made--in Stock NOW--Ready for Your Inspection.
