"Yellow Journalism"
The Dally Drovers Journal-Stockman of South Omaha had the following in its last Friday's issue in regard to newspapers that sacrifice veracity to a desire to be sensational:
Now it appears that the loss of life in the Ohio floods has been greatly exaggerated by the newspapers and while it has been an appalling catastrophe the situation is not nearly so bad as painted. People seem to like exaggerated statements and liberally patronize the papers that make a practice of playing upon the sensational so that enterprising and unscrupulous publishers try to make everything they print as lurid and sensational as possible with little or no regard for the truth. According to the Denver papers Omaha was practically wiped off the map in last Sunday evening's storm, thousands of lives were lost and what property was left by the storm was being destroyed by the flames. In fact the situation in Denver is so bad that the papers in that city cannot be believed even under ordinary circumstances and a society has been organized there to check ultra sensational journalism. The members of the society are pledged to absolutely refuse to subscribe or in any way patronize these yellow journals that are a disgrace to the profession. If the people only knew it they themselves are responsible for the existence of the yellow sheets that do so much harm. So long as they continue to read them under pretext of curiosity or otherwise they are helping to create a demand for them and a little more discrimination on the part of the public would have a very decided influence in toning down these lurid and unreliable papers and make them more readable as well as more trustworthy.

Artesian Well
Town of Edgemont enthusiastic over New Well, described in last Issue of The Herald

Don't forget that I am still in the plumbing business. E. W. RAY. Advt. 17f-2033

The town of Edgemont is now enjoying the benefits of a hot water artesian well. The following, clipped from the last issue of The Edgemont Express will give our readers an idea of what a well of this kind will mean to a town.

Edgemont's deep well is finally accepted and capped ready for use by the city. This little sentence says a lot and yet it does not express half the good this well can do, or the self sacrifice of our public-spirited citizens in subscribing their money to the tune of $27,000. This money has been held in trust by our people, not knowing when the call would be made for it. What sublime trust in the success of the well, and where is there a city that will bear it? To put up the money to go into the earth 2983 feet to get water for the town. These gentlemen are worthy of a place in the hall of fame.

The flow of water struck a week ago last Saturday was followed by others until Wednesday night the town was aroused by the siren whistle at the well notifying the people that the big flow had been struck. The well house was soon crowded and everybody was congratulating his neighbor.

We are now in possession of a well that will furnish this town with water for some time to come. The water is pure and soft and the housewives are already wishing for it in their homes. There is water for a big plunge bath after the wants of the people have been supplied. This would bring outside money to the town in large quantities and be a great drawing card. The water, after being used in the plunge, could be utilized in the irrigation of lawns, etc., and thus make Edgemont a city of shade trees.

The medicinal qualities of the water would help in a sanitarium and we understand that plans are now in the formative stage. The heat of the water 128 degrees, will make it possible for the residences to be heated, making a great saving in coal and other fuel. Cheap water will bring people to the town to live and it should not be long until Edgemont is the home of wealthy people. With the resources that are all over and around the town in the line of building material the city should be a place of stone blocks, brick residences and cement walks. And all these would mean that business would be successful and profitable and our merchants would be able to branch out in lines hitherto impossible. We could go on for columns telling what this well means for Edgemont, but will sum it up saying that it is the greatest thing that has happened to her since she became a town.

TELL THE WORLD ABOUT IT
If you have anything to sell—
Tell the world about it.
Want to boost an article?
Tell the world about it.
Being just a violet
By a stone is pretty, yet
Dividends it will not get—
Tell the world about it!

If you like the place you dwell—
Tell the world about it.
Like to see it doing well?
Tell the world about it.
There are towns of which I've read,
Towns of which no good was said,
But the most of them are dead—
So, unless you want your town likewise,
Tell the world about it!

Agriculture in the Country School

Advocating that the boys and girls stay on the farm, and at the same time teaching city subjects in the rural schools, is contradictory. If the boys and girls are taught one thing, they cannot be expected to do something else, even if they are advised to. A few years ago the question was asked the boys and girls in thirty-four schools in Wright county, Iowa—"What do you want to do?" Of the 164 boys, 157 wanted to leave the farm and 163 of the 174 girls wanted to do likewise. After agriculture and home economics had been taught for three years the same question was asked in the same schools. This time 162 of the 174 boys and 161 of the 178 girls to whom the question was submitted wanted to stay on the farm. This changing an almost unanimous desire of leaving the farm to an almost unanimous desire of staying on the farm seems miraculous; yet it was done through making a little change in the course of study. It is simple, however, for boys and girls will do the things that they have been taught how to do. Their interest will be developed in the things they are taught. They will see more in them than in things they know less about. Again, agriculture and home economics are the things that boys and girls are the most interested in to begin with. They live in an agricultural and home economics laboratory. The knowledge that they have when they come to school is on these two subjects so that education to be most effective must begin with the children's knowledge, and not as Professor Minard says—"Take them from where they aren't to where they don't want to go." That is what it is that makes the school irksome and that makes the boys, especially, want to leave school. The way to keep the boys on the farm is to teach them about the things they have to deal with. If it is desired to have them leave the farm, then keep agriculture and home economics out of the course of study.

The will to do springs from the knowledge that one can do. One will like to do what he can do well. Doing work that one doesn't understand is drudgery. Most boys must enter productive work. If they are not educated for it then it will be drudgery. Most girls will manage homes. If they are not taught for it, home making will be drudgery. So it is in the power of the school to make either enthusiastic workers or the drudges of the boys and girls.

What are the schools of our state doing to teach the boys and girls the principles of agriculture so that they will know what to do and why they are doing it? Are the teachers of our schools prepared to give the pupils instruction in agriculture? Our attention has recently been called to the Campbell Correspondence Course in Soil Culture. This course is not only adapted to the needs of the farmer, but to the needs of the teacher who cannot take time to go to an agricultural college. Every man interested in better farming and especially every teacher in the country schools should send for a catalogue of this school and if possible take the course. Write to the Campbell Correspondence School, of Lincoln, Nebraska, and ask them for a free catalogue.—Advt. 2020-17-1f
