Lloyd's Column

Enoch Boyer and Doc Copeland were talking together the other day. Said Doc, "Did you see my picture in The Herald?" "Why," said Enoch, "I always thought that was Lloyd Thomas' picture." Who is the joke on, Hep?

Here's another one: Doc and a friend were walking down the street Saturday, when the friend said, "What do you think of the sporting dope in The Herald? I think that fellow isn't there at all. He reads all the dope in the Post and News and World-Herald and then writes it up for The Herald. I surely could beat that guy myself. He ain't in it a tall. Who is he?" "Um, um," said Doc, "I write that myself. Didn't you see my name at the head of the column?" The friend is still buying.

The following article, from a recent issue of the Phoenix, Arizona Republican, contains some very good thoughts. Phoenix has three daily newspapers—all of them first class, and they all get a good business, without finding it necessary to resort to slanderous attacks on each other in order to get it:

"When Newspapers Get Mad"
"A writer in the California Outlook, in a survey of the political outlook in Los Angeles, speaks of the acrimonious attitude of the Los Angeles newspapers toward one another and toward all persons who do not follow their respective leads. He says: 'There are several things that come pretty high in the newspaper business and getting mad is well up in the list.'

"That is true, and a man does not have to be in the newspaper business very long to find it out. It is strange that every newspaper man has not discovered it. The characteristic attitude of the Los Angeles newspapers toward one another has for years been one of bitter antagonism. Where there has not been a public issue to serve as a pretext for a quarrel, the bickering has been steady and personal. It has appeared that public or political differences have only masked their private hatred of one another.

"We know of no other large city where this situation prevails to so great an extent, though it is closely approached in Denver. It is apt to be the rule in rural communities. For many years, Los Angeles has been described by visitors as a 'great overgrown country town.' We have sometimes thought that the course of the newspapers contributed to that impression of the outsider.

"When one newspaper 'gets mad' at another, it may have a few hot-headed, ignorant followers who participate in its anger and when there is a newspaper war two small hostile camps composed of such followers may be formed. The great mass of citizens, however, are outside both camps. They are either contemptuously indifferent or else are moved to disgust or amusement by the childish, futile quarrel. The usefulness of the newspapers is temporarily and often permanently impaired. Their influence with the better class of citizens is lost.

"A private citizen cannot get mad in public, disturb the peace, and maintain the respect of his neighbor. Though his indignation may be honest, he has suddenly surrendered to one weakness. He gives rise to the suspicion that he has other latent weaknesses. Newspapers, like strong men, should always exercise self-control.

"When a newspaper is 'mad' it loses its sense of fairness as well as a proper sense of every thing else, and when a community finds that a newspaper is unfair, it has lost pretty nearly everything of value to it, unless the community contains a large enough element of the virtuous and the ignorant to support that kind of a newspaper.

"We do not mean that newspapers should always shrink from an antagonism. On the contrary, they should always be alert to antagonize wrong, anything that threatens the growth, prosperity or morals of the community. In such a case a newspaper may be led to attack the policies of another paper, but no general antagonism must be injected into the attack."

Politician's Ideal.

In the opinion of the average politician the ideal form of government would be one under which everybody could have a public office.

Just Boss.

A plumber, by the way, is a skilled mechanic who sits on a soap box while his helper does the work.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Foolish Effort.

Some men not only expect the worst, but take the trouble to hunt for it.

Buzzing Sounds Made by Insects.
The different humming or buzzing sound in insects is caused by the vibration of the wings, and the more rapid the vibrations the sharper the sound. Scientists have estimated that the common house fly vibrates its wings about 335 times a second and the honeybee 400 times, though a tired bee moves its wings more slowly and makes a different sound from a fresh one. The butterfly is content to move more slowly and makes no noise.

Worth Knowing.

Never throw away pieces of lemon after they have been squeezed with the lemon squeezer, for they come in handy for removing stains from the hands and elsewhere. Dipped into salt they will scour copper kettles nicely and remove stains from brasswork. Lemon like this will take stains, dirt and odor from pans and kettles as nothing else will. The odors of fish and onions can thus be easily removed.

True to Nature.

The tots in a primary class in sense-training were imitating anything they choose. When it was Hazel's turn, she stepped into the center of the room and wriggled her body from side to side. No one could guess what she was impersonating, so she was asked to explain. "Why," she said, "I was a little dog wagging its tail."

Changing Nature Indirectly.

You are constantly assured that you cannot change human nature; that you cannot make people over by process of law. But if you cannot reform men by reforming the conditions that make men what they are, how is it that you can so easily debauch and degrade them by reversing the process?—Collier's Weekly.

Natural Question.

"I am so very fond of music," said Miss Kittish, as she swung herself round on the piano stool and faced Mr. Harkins, after thrumming away for half an hour for his entertainment. "Ah!" replied the young gentleman thoughtlessly. "Why don't you take lessons?"—Stray Stories.

His Unavailing Search.

"Well, James Henry Williams, did you enjoy yourself at the seaside?" "Yes, teacher, very much. I liked the sea, but I couldn't find the inkble." "The what, James Henry Williams?" "The inkble, teacher; where it says in the Bible, 'The sea and all that is in them is.'"

Sacrifice for Art's Sake.

"You say you have devoted your life to art," said the man who tries to be polite, even when surprised. "Yes," replied Mr. Cumroff. "I have devoted myself to an effort to become rich enough to own a gallery of genuine old masters."—Washington Star.

Some Good May Be Done.

I told something to a friend once and he replied, "Gee do you want a fellow to be perfect?" I said, "Yes, but I never expect to see one, but there's lots of rottenness which can be cut out of the efforts of all of us."—Exchange.
