J. E. SCHOLTZ VISITS ALLIANCE

J. E. Scholtz, a wealthy Casper, Wyoming, hardware merchant, came to Alliance Thursday bringing with him a small boy, John Kern, whom he placed in St. Agnes Academy for schooling. Mr. Scholtz has been in the west for twenty-seven years, locating in Gordon, Nebr., before the town of Alliance was begun. He went from Gordon to Edgemont, where he was located for five years, moving from there to Casper fourteen years ago.

Mr. Scholtz is an old time friend and associate of Roy Beckwith, Alliance clothing merchant. He has also been acquainted for many years with W. D. Rumer and other old timers in Alliance. He enjoys talking over old times with these men and while here they spent many hours telling of the early days of western Nebraska.

While in Alliance Mr. Scholtz met Curly the Crow, who stopped on his way to Billings from Washington, D. C. Mr. Scholtz talks the Indian language fluently and he and Curly conversed in that tongue while together. They both knew many Indians who were prominent in the battles of the west.

In speaking with The Herald reporter of the condition of Casper at this time and its extreme rapid growth, Mr. Scholtz said: "Casper is indeed experiencing a rapid growth but our industrial club is doing its best to prevent a boom or boom conditions. I can safely state that the club has kept out one thousand boomers in the last year. These are men who would not produce and who wanted to locate in Casper to make money from the favorable conditions which exist there. But we keep that kind of people out if possible. We expect Casper, with its immense oil fields, to make a good sized little city but we want the growth to be sure and steady. I am a western man and always have been. I found a little poem the other day that just expresses my feelings."

Out where the handclasp's a little stronger,
Out where the smile dwells a little longer,
That's where the West begins;
Out where the sun is a little brighter,
Where the snows that fall are a trifle whiter,
Where the bonds of home are a wee bit tighter,
That's where the West begins
Out where the skies are a trifle bluer,
Out where friendship's a little truer,
That's where the West begins;
Where there's laughter in every streamlet flowing,
Where there's more of reaping and less of sowing—
That's where the West begins.
Out where the world is in the making,
Where fewer hearts with despair are aching—
That's where the West begins;
Where there's more of singing and less of sighing,
Where there's more of giving and less of buying,
And a man makes friends without half trying—
That's where the West begins.

DONNER VIEWS PROPERTY

L. G. Donner, of Wayne, Nebraska, a prosperous farmer, who owns several hundred acres of Box Butte county land, came to the city Thursday morning accompanied by his brother, J. C. Donner, of Malvern, Iowa. L. G. Donner's main purpose in coming to Alliance at this time was to show his brother that even though eastern Nebraska and Iowa are drought stricken this year, Box Butte county is raising banner crops. They spent all day Thursday and most of Friday looking over the county and L. G. Donner states that his Iowa brother was fully convinced that we have them all skinned when it comes to raising crops on a dry year. J. C. Donner went into a potato field and started digging up a few hills to see how the potato crop was going. The first hill brought out eleven fine spuds, the second hill brought up sixteen, most of them large ones. That was enough right there.

J. C. Donner returned to Malvern Friday night and took with him a basketful of samples of crops raised here this season. He is now planning to sell out his Iowa property and move to Box Butte county. L. G. Donner called at The Herald office, paid his subscription up to the last of 1914, and said he hoped that he could come out for good some of these days. He doesn't want to dispose of his property here and wishes that he could buy more.

Miss Kathryn Hagerty and Miss Kathryn Donahue, who is visiting the latter, returned from Miss Hagerty's ranch near Bridgeport Saturday noon.

CURLY TELLS OF EASTERN TRIP

Ben McIntosh, known as Curly the Crow, said to be the only survivor of the Custer Massacre, came to Alliance Friday morning and stopped over until noon. While here he visited with friends and told of his experiences on his eastern trip, which he has made since he was in Alliance a few weeks ago.

Curly has tackled a big proposition, that of getting suffrage rights (the right to vote) for the Indian. He has seen 35,000 young men and women of his people graduate from Carlisle and similar schools, every one of them well educated and ready for the ballot. "I have nine states that have already signified their willingness to back my proposition," he declared. "Senator Smoot of Utah is the man who will present the bill. While in Washington I saw President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and other prominent men to whom I presented my proposition. The bill which I am backing and which will be introduced by Senator Smoot is expected to come up the first thing next March.

"On our five reservations we have seventy-two government employees who are drawing salaries of $37,521 a year. My plan is to take this money and build a home for old Indians. Then I want to see the young Indians—those who have been educated and trained in government schools, get some benefit from their education. I want them to have state's rights responsibilities. I want them to go where they please and do as they please just as other educated people do. The present method of treating them is weakening and pauperizing them. The government is making dependents out of them rather than good citizens. This is not right. The people at large are willing to give them these rights.

"On my eastern trip I stopped over in Chicago, where I received a great deal of attention. I also visited a number of other large cities. I am now going back to my home at Billings, where I have a 320 acre irrigated farm which is paying me a good income."

The history of Curly the Crow has been an eventful one. He was kidnapped from his father's home when he was 5 years old. His father was a Scotchman named McIntosh. His mother was a daughter of Chief Red Cloud. He was stolen from the Crow reservation in Wyoming by mountain Cheyennes. Then he was stolen by the Comanches. The Comanches captured the Cheyenne who had stolen him. Curly—so called because he inherited his father's crisp hair—saved the man's life who in exchange told him of his father and mother. Curly returned to them and later became an interpreter and scout for the government.

From his watch chain hangs a curious silver ring mounted with a dull blue stone. It was made by an Indian with a leaden mold and given to his son. Custer ordered the son shot. Curly leaped in front of the firing squad.
"I'll take his place," he cried.
This saved the young Indian's life and he presented Curly with the ring.
