

Lloyd's Column

In one of the Alliance schools the reading about a king of olden time who was cruel. The pupils were asked to describe the king. One said, "He was a heartless fellow." Said the teacher, "Does that mean that he had no heart?" One little fellow raised his hand and said, "He had a heart but he did not use it." A number of the teachers were discussing this later when they were asked, "Is that the case with you teachers?" "No," one replied, "we have hearts but we have no opportunity to use them here." Just what she meant by that is problematical.

Since time immemorial blind men who wander alone require a stick or cane with which to find their way about and avoid running into objects in their path. We saw a man recently who possesses the unusual intelligence of the blind and puts it to extra good advantage. He is a great smoker of cigars. A friend gave him a Pittsburgh stogie one day to smoke. He lit the stogie, placed it in his mouth and started to walk around the room. The stogie, as most of them are, was about three feet in length and extended in front of him guarding him from striking objects. Since that day he has taken to smoking stogies and no longer carries the cane.

A Boston clergyman tells this story: "While in a New Jersey town lately I noticed large posters announcing a lecture thus:

At Y. M. C. A. Hall
HELL

Its Location and Certainty.
"And immediately following in equally bold type was this:
TELL MOTHER I'LL BE THERE will be sung by Mr. Gerald Harvis."

The waiter who bawls out his order to the cook in the kitchen may soon be as extinct as the dodo; but his cries should live forever.

"Mutton broth in a hurry," says a customer. "Baa-Baa in the rain! Make him run!" shouts the waiter. "Beefsteak and onions," says a customer. "John Bull! Make him a gunny!" shouts the waiter.

"Where's my baked potato?" asks a customer. "Mrs. Murphy in a seal-skin coat!" shouts the waiter.

"Two fried eggs. Don't fry 'em too hard," says a customer. "Adam and Eve in the garden! Leave their eyes open!" shouts the waiter.

"Poached eggs on toast," says a customer. "Bride and groom on a raft in the middle of the ocean!" shouts the waiter.

"Chicken chiquettes," says a customer. "Fowl Baw!" shouts the waiter.

"Hash," says a customer. "Gentleman wants to take a chance!" says the waiter. "I'll have hash, too," says the next customer. "Another sport!" shouts the waiter.

"Glass of milk," says a customer. "Lot it rain!" shouts the waiter.

"Frankfurters and sauerkraut, good and hot," says a customer. "Fido, Shap and a bale of hay!" shouts the waiter; "and let 'em sizzle."

Chestnuts

The corn crop of a certain western county is nearly a total failure this year. One morning a short time ago a farmer took a sack and went to his sixty acre sweet corn field to see if he could find enough roasting ears for a meal. In going over the field he found that each ear had only a couple of rows of corn, so he cut the corn off the cobs and had it cooked for dinner.

About dinner time a young fellow who lives near drove up, and the farmer invited him to stay. At the table he passed the corn to the young man first, and the visitor took one spoonful of corn and started to take another, when the farmer stopped him and said, "Don't you think you are going a little strong on the corn?"

The young man was very much embarrassed. "Why?" he stammered.

"Well, you have about fifteen acres of corn on your place now."

Alice, aged five, was helping her mother dust the drawing room. She was hidden beneath the piano when her mother heard her exclaim, "Oh, mother, there's enough dust under here for God to make a man!"

A man passing a saloon was suddenly startled by a figure fling out of the door and landing in a heap on the sidewalk.

"You have been thrown out," observed a passer-by.

"Yes," said the victim, "but you wait! There are four of them in there. I am going 'n right now to 'throw them out one by one; stand by and count."

The man reentered the saloon, and at once there was a commotion inside, and again a man came flying out, fighting not too gently on the sidewalk.

"ONE!" cried the counter.

"Never mind counting," said the voice from the sidewalk; it's me again."

The young lawyer had just opened his office, and his shingle, the paint scarcely dry, hung outside the door.

A step was heard, and the next moment a man's frame was silhouetted against the ground glass of the door.

Hastily the legal fledgling stepped to his brand new telephone and, taking down the receiver, gave every appearance of being in a business conversation.

"Yes, Mr. Brown," he was saying, as the man entered, "I'll attend to that corporation matter for you. Mr. Martin had me on the 'phone this morning and asked me to settle a damage suit for his railroad, but I had to turn him down—I'm so rushed with cases just now. But I'll attend to your matter, although I'll have to sandwich it in somewhere between my other cases. Yes, yes, All right. Good-by."

And, hanging up the receiver, he turned to his visitor, having, as he thought, duly impressed him.

"Excuse me, Mr. Young," the man apologized, "but I'm from the telephone company. I've come to connect up your 'phone."

When the agent paid Mrs. Stone the amount of insurance her husband had carried, he asked her to take out a policy on her own life.

"I believe I will," she said, "as my husband had such good luck."

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codeine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. It cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative.
