WELLS ON HILLS

Many farmers who reside on rolling land locate their buildings on high points or hill tops primarily for the point of view. Some farmers, however, reserve the elevation for a good well, wind mill and cistern. From the bottom of the cistern, by pipe line, is drawn the water used on the farm, one line of pipe running to the house and the other to the barn, hog house and water tank, so that all points are served by the gravity system. This method is very satisfactory and is especially appreciated by the farm wife, who by the simple turning of a faucet, secures water for the house instead of having to carry it from a distant well. Oftentimes the water must be carried up hill to the house. The amount of labor connected with the water on the farm is of such magnitude that buildings can well afford to vacate the high points and take a location so that the water supply can have the natural gravity advantage to be had only by a hill top well.

SECOND SPRAYING

The second spraying of apples, says J. R. Duncan, secretary of the state horticultural society, is the most important one in the fight to control the codling moth. This spray, if properly applied, will so reduce the number that there will be few to produce the second brood which usually hatches out in August. The second or petal fall treatment should be applied as rather coarse spray. The Bordeaux nozzle should be used. The pressure should tax the capacity of the pump and the maximum should be 250 pounds. The materials used are lime sulphur, (1 one-third gallons to 50 gallons water) as a fungicide and arsenate of lead (2 pounds to 50 gallon of water) as an insecticide. These are to be applied in combined spray. The time for application is short as the spray should be used after three-fourths of the petals have fallen and before the calyx cup has closed. This period is usually about ten days.

RURAL EDUCATION

The editors of the Saturday Evening Post who have brains enough to produce a paper which has achieved a circulation of 2,000,000 copies and is one of the most widely read single publications in the world, have this to say of rural school consolidation:

"It ought to be pretty well understood by this time that the one-room rural district school, beloved of our grandfathers is mostly a scandalous institution. The typical teacher is a girl just out of normal, much underpaid, sometimes overworked and sometimes with only half a dozen pupils of assorted ages.

"A Vermont report covering thirty-five such schools shows that in three years there were one hundred and seventeen different teachers, of whom—on an average—more than half served less than two terms.

"A great majority of these schools are poorly housed and hardly equipped at all, just a bare little room with a desk, a rostrum, a blackboard and a poisonous cast iron stove. That efficient instruction can be had under such conditions is out of the question.

"And there is less and less excuse for the typical one-room, ungraded rural school district. Our grandfathers could have that or nothing. In their day the nearest town was ten miles, probably, away and the road all but impassible half the year.

"Now, all over the middle west at least, there are few rural schools that are not within easy haul of a village graded school; still fewer districts that might not have a fairly graded school within easy haul by consolidating the districts. Already in some localities a wagon to bring in the country children is as much a part of the educational equipment as the traditional blackboard itself.

"Like some other poor institutions, the little red school house subsists mainly on prejudice and mere inertia. If educating children is worth all this effort, to give them tolerably efficient teaching is worth just a little more effort.

NEWSPAPER DON'TS

Don't take your home paper. It is the most active and powerful factor in building up your town, and to support it would involve you in the work.

Don't pay for it if you take it. Newspapers are run on wind, and the editor wouldn't keep the money anyway. He'd most likely pay it on his bills.

Don't fail to tell the editor how to run the paper. He has nothing to do but to listen and keep his temper sweet.

Don't put your name to what you want published. It's the editor's business to espouse unpopular causes and take your chestnuts out of the fire. What hurts your business might also hurt his—but that's different.

Don't notify the editor when you change your postoffice address. He may lose track of you and you may escape paying your last year's subscription.

Don't forget to write on both sides of the paper. The printers might forget how to swear.

Lloyd's Column

State Auditor Howard evidently suspects that he has a traitor in his camp, judging from his opinion of a traitor, expressed in the following vivid language: "After God had finished the rattlesnake, the toad and the vampire, He had some awful substance left, with which he made a traitor. A traitor is a two-legged animal with a cork-screw soul, a watersogged brain and a combination backbone made of jelly and glue. Where other people have their hearts he carries a tumor of rotten principles. When the traitor comes down the street, honest men should turn their backs, and angels in heaven take refuge behind their harps and the devil bar-lock the gates of hell."

The editor of the Minden News publishes a good newspaper but the local merchants fail to give him or his competitor the proper advertising patronage. He recently printed the following soliloquy:

You Would Never Suspect It
By reading over the advertising columns of either of the two Minden papers, but it is true, nevertheless: This town has five general stores one grocery and racket store, two picture shows, three hardware and furniture stores, one bakery, two photograph studios, four implement dealing firms, two harness shops, three garages, four livery barns, two banks, three millinery establishments, two hotels, one tailor shop, two shoe shops, one feed store, three jewelry stores, three barber shops, three drug stores, two lumber yards, three grain elevators, two blacksmith shops, one marble establishment, two clothing stores, three meat markets, one variety store, two undertakers, one tin shop, two windmill and well men, two plumbers, one hospital, one flouring mill, two restaurants, three cream stations, four real estate dealers, five physicians, three dentists, nine practicing lawyers, one chiroprapist, one veterinary surgeon, and one osteopath.

We believe that is all; if we have missed anybody, we hope they will let us know about it. This is the only newspaper advertising some of them have had in many a day and it won't cost them a cent. We have solved the high cost of living problem and have learned how to live and run a live business institution without money or patronage.

Something About Government Ownership

No. 2

Under government ownership a good piece of work can be done. It has often been done, but never with regard to time or economy.

With the highest wages and the highest material costs, America under private ownership, with but 6 per cent of the population, has 66 per cent of the world's telephones, and the cheapest and best service in the world.

Below is a table showing the average cost, per year, for telephone service in this and European countries based on official reports.

TELLS ON THE KIDNEYS

Alliance People Have Found This to Be True

The strain of overwork tells on the weakened kidneys. The hurry and worry of business men, the heavy lifting and stooping of workmen, the women's household cares, tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they can no longer filter the poison from the blood and the whole body suffers from the waste matter that accumulates. Weakened kidneys need quick assistance. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for weakened kidneys; tired, worn-out backs—have proven their merit in thousands of cases. Below is convincing proof from this locality:

Mrs. E. T. Lehman, Sidney, Nebr., says: "For a long time I was troubled by pains in the small of my back. Whenever I caught cold, it settled in my kidneys and brought on stiffness and lameness across my loins. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills removed the trouble and made me feel like a different woman."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lehman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
