INTERESTING TESTIMONIALS

B. S. Payne, the prairie dog exterminator, who is stopping at The Nebraska in Alliance, has a number of very interesting testimonials from prominent western ranchmen as to his work in killing the dogs. A conservative estimate, based on actual figures, placed the number of dogs killed by him and his crews of men at over one billion dogs in the last thirty-five years.

Wm. B. Miner of Fort Collins, Colorado, says in a testimonial: "I had B. S. Payne kill dogs for me thirty years ago but the setters near me did not kill theirs so they came back to me. Three years ago I got him to kill the dogs on over seven thousand acres at my home ranch and he did a fine job, for his work doubled the crop of grass and of grain."

Temperature Hangs Low
Starting with the cold weather of last week, the section of western Nebraska has felt a touch of real winter, a decided change from the unusually warm fall weather. The temperature has hung around the zero mark every night, going several degrees below at times. The ground is still covered with a heavy blanket of snow.
