AT THE NEW THEATRE

Some Excellent Features Booked for the Next Few Days—"The Moonstone" 2 Nights

"The Moonstone"

The five-part photoplay, "The Moonstone", is based on Wilkie Collins' celebrated novel and play of the same name, and the leading characters are Eugene O'Brien and Elaine Hammerstein.

A diamond of fabulous value is stolen from the eye of an Indian idol. The Englishman, on his return to London, is pursued by three Indian priests in disguise whose object is to secure the "Moonstone" at all costs. Falling in its recovery, the priests will lose caste in their native land. The Englishman, Herculio, is found drowned, presumably having been killed by the Indians. The diamonds passed into the possession of his friend, Franklin Blake.

Blake is followed by a band of Indian marauders. He presents the diamond to his fiancée, from whom it is stolen. A detective is called in. Another girl who is in love with Blake commits suicide, and as a result suspicion is attached to her, as she leaves a mysterious note for Blake.

After a long and varied search, Blake finds the diamond in the possession of a money lender. In the meantime, Blake's fiancée learns of the note the dead girl left, and learns that there had been a strong attachment between her and Blake. A bitter lovers' quarrel results.

Blake is a somnambulist, and a doctor discovers that while walking in his sleep one night he took the diamond. The gem was stolen from Blake while he was asleep, and was never recovered. The thief later confesses the theft and died before telling how he had disposed of the diamond. Blake and his fiancée were happily re-united.

"The Moonstone" will be shown Thursday and Friday nights, owing to a special arrangement which Mr. Cramer was able to make with the booking company. It is one of those plays that one can see twice without getting tired of it.

"Love and Aviation"

Judging from the title, one would think this was a comedy, but it is not. It is a drama of the strongest type, and one which contains a great moral lesson for everyone.

Mr. Warren, a reporter, learns that a great aviator will fly over his city that day. Mrs. Warren wants to meet the great aviator on account of his great fame. She is a beautiful, fascinating woman, and when she and the aviator meet a look of mutual understanding passes between the two. The aviator, Flarion, is invited to the Warren house to dine, and in the course of the meal the aviator cuts his finger. While the husband is in the gardens viewing the machine, Flarion and his wife arrange a billet-doux, and she urges the aviator to return at an early date, as she wants to see him.

Warren learns of his wife's treachery, and proposes to circumvent the meeting between the two. He sends himself a faked telegram announcing that he must go out of the city for a day or two, but that night returns and finds his wife in Flarion's embrace. The husband damages the aeroplane, but the break is discovered just before Flarion and Mrs. Warren leave for a flight. Warren is nearly crazed with grief as he does not know the break has been repaired, and is just on the point of committing suicide when he is informed that the flight has been made safely.

Flarion, seeing that Warren loves his wife deeply, urges her to return to him and confess and ask forgiveness, which she does. As the picture fades, they are nestled in each other's arms, embarking on life's journey, each benefitted with the experience of a few days.

Proved That He Was Sane

Two men recently had an argument at the Alliance stock yards regarding some of the horses which were being inspected for the war. One of them was Lucius McCarthy. "You're a fool," said McCarthy. "You're crazy," said the other party. "I'm not crazy," said McCarthy, "and I can prove it." And to clinch the argument he pulled from his pocket the statement received some time back from the state insane asylum at Hastings certifying that he was a sane man.

One Way to Keep Dry

An Alliance young man recently took his lady friend to a country dance, eighteen miles away. Everything went fine but shortly after they had started on the return trip it began to rain torrents. The auto they were riding in had no top and they became thoroughly soaked. The only dry spot on the young man was the inside of his right sleeve, and strange to say, the young lady's waist was dry. Their friends are trying to figure it out.

NO OFFICIAL MEETING

was brought up. It was suggested that a man can be hired for $60 per month the year round and this will probably be done. The weeds are very thick and there is a lot of work necessary to be done. The prices of cemetery lots was also discussed. A bill for $63.25 for cutting weeds at the cemetery was presented and a bill for graves opened and not paid for of $101.

Bought Box Butte Land

E. T. Kibble, the Alliance real estate dealer, recently sold a fine quarter-section of land to a non-resident owner of the adjoining quarter. The land is located ten miles north of Alliance. The owner came out to look over his land and was so well pleased with conditions here that he added to his holdings.

Bryan Visited Alliance

A. Victor Bryan, secretary of the Mitchell Volunteer Fire Department, was an Alliance visitor Friday morning, coming this far Thursday afternoon with friends who went on east. Bryan visited the fire department headquarters and made The Herald office a pleasant call. He returned home Friday afternoon.

Cows Brought Good Price

Hall & Graham, of Alliance, had two loads of cows on the South Omaha market Monday, August 9, among which were included forty-four cows that averaged 1,008 pounds and sold at $6.75, through the commission firm of Tagg Brothers & Moorehead. These cows were from the Morrill county ranch south of Alliance.

Visited Colorado Springs

Colorado Springs, August 18—J. B. Bence of Alliance was a recent visitor here on a vacation trip. He and friends composed a party that took the trip to the summit of Pike's Peak via the summit cog road.

Drag the Roads

When the smiles of spring appear Drag the roads;
When the summertime is near Drag the roads;
When the corn is in the ear, In the winter cold and drear, Every season of the year, Drag the roads.
When you've nothing else to do Drag the roads;
If but for an hour to two, Drag the roads;
It will keep them good as new With a purpose firm and true; Fall in line, it's up to you— Drag the roads.
