IN FLOOD DAYS

Fremont Herald Tells of Interesting Incidents That Happened in Tully's Boyhood Days

Many of the old-time residents will recall Charley Tully, who as a boy went through a thrilling experience in the great flood of March, 1881. Mr. Tully is now of manhood's estate, a well known and popular ranchman of northwestern Nebraska, residing at Alliance. He has become wealthy and is best known as the head of the Star Cattle Company, which controls large ranges and great herds of cattle. He is being urged by the demerats of the Sixth congressional district to file his name for the position of national committeeman, while others are boosting him for a senatorial nomination from the Twenty-eighth district, on the democratic ticket.

When the great flood of 1881 swept down the Platte valley, Charley Tully was but a young lad, and resided with his family in the west part of Fremont. The waters gradually rose about the home until the father and mother and children were forced to the very top of the roof of the house. The cattle and horses were in water so deep they nearly drowned and only saved themselves by getting on to great stacks of manure, thus keeping their heads above water. It was a critical situation for the family for some hours. Afterwards, young Charley was asked how they stood it on the roof, and he innocently replied: "Mother was praying, father was swearing and we kids were hanging on for dear life."—Fremont Herald.

LETTERS FROM OVER STATE

Favorite Candidate for Governor of the Democratic Side in Meeting the Voters, Making Speeches and is Becoming a Seasoned Campaigner.

North Platte, Neb., March 29.—There is not a busier place in Nebraska than the Neville Campaign Headquarters. Forsooth, there is not a busier man than Keith Neville—speaking, writing, lunching, meeting old friends and making new ones—there is no moment of rest for him when home, and he strikes a strenuous gait when on his speaking trips. But, he takes to it all like a duck to water, and it is freely said that he has already become a seasoned campaigner.

Like his distinguished father, the late Congressman Neville, he likes it. Not even the Mexican war excitement tends to divert the popular west Nebraska candidate from his determination to win the gubernatorial nomination April 18. He keeps right at it, by word and by letter, saying to the constant string of callers—stockmen, farmers, business men, fellow democrats and friendly republicans—that he is making a frank, clean, honorable campaign, backed by no special interests and shackled to no faction—firmly resolved if elected, to ENFORCE THE LAWS TO THE LETTER.

Speaking engagements will prevent Mr. Neville from meeting his old friend, W. J. Bryan, who comes here to speak for his brother, Charley, on the eve of next Tuesday's election. Mr. Neville is being supported here by those having divergent views on the license question. The result of the contest will therefore have no bearing upon his campaign.

It is plain that one quality of Keith Neville impresses everybody—frankness. He don't say one thing in the western part of the state and another thing in the eastern. He is firm, but not dictatorial, and is considerate of those who take issue with him.

In the stream of letters which come pouring in from democrats over the state, most of them warmly commend Mr. Neville's position on the issues of the day. Many of them begin: "I admire your frank and candid manner." Others: "Your statement shows that you have the courage to be governor." And still others: "I can use all the literature you will send me—because it rings true!" and hundreds say, "I was just waiting for a man like you." But most of his letters, from all and near, enthusiastically applaud his famous declaration: "I am for WOODROW WILSON WITHOUT APOLOGY OR EXPLANATION."

GETTING POTASH FROM BRINES

Experiments for Benefit of Farmer and Manufacturer

The urgent need of a domestic supply of potash salts has greatly increased since the importations from Germany were stopped. During this time the price of high-grade potash has advanced from $39 to about $500 a ton. Meanwhile efforts to find commercially workable deposits of potash in this country have been eagerly and diligently made, both by private capitalists and public agencies. The United States Geological Survey, appreciating the needs of the manufacturers and farmers of this country, has endeavored both to find deposits of soluble potash salts and to discover practicable methods of extracting potash from rocks that carry relatively large proportions of potassium. Every clue that might yield valuable results has been followed up in a country-wide investigation, extending from New York to California. The Geological Survey, in its search for potash, has sunk several deep holes in the deserts of Nevada and is now drilling one in the panhandle of Texas.

The Geological Survey is also making some laboratory experiments designed to aid in discovering a cheap process of separating potassium salts from natural brines. In these experiments special attention has been given to the evaporation of brines rich in potassium. The results of some of the earlier work were published late in 1915 as Professional Paper 95—E. More recent experiments have been made with the natural brine from Searles Lake, Cal., which contains the equivalent of nearly 12 per cent of potassium chloride in the solid salts. The results are given in a recent Survey publication, "Evaporation of Brine from Searles Lake, Cal.," by W. B. Hicks, issued as Professional Paper 98—A. This report shows the changes in the composition of the solution resulting from the evaporation of the brine, the composition of the crystals deposited from the hot solution during evaporation, and the composition of the crystals deposited when the solution was cooled. A copy of the report may be obtained free of charge by addressing the Director, United States Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

The data recorded indicate that carefully controlled fractional evap-
