Get the Right Number From the Telephone Directory

Do not rely on your memory. It sometimes plays strange tricks with telephone numbers.

Few people can remember telephone numbers accurately.

Many errors are made in calling numbers by transposing the figures. For example, people will call 953 when 935 is wanted.

Calling numbers in error or by not giving them slowly and distinctly so the operators can understand are the causes of most "wrong numbers."

A wrong number wastes your time, delays your service and annoys the person who answers the call.

Always get the number from the directory first.
