Mayor Rousey of Alliance was having a good laugh by himself the other morning. When asked by the writer what the fun was about he handed over a slip containing the following: A sale bill bearing the signature of "Will Quitwork" has been going the rounds of the press and purports to be a Missouri auction sale, giving evidence of what queer combinations can be made by a printer who is suffering from the effects of a night out. The bill announces that the sale will begin "in the morning sharp," of a certain date and includes the following list: 25 good cows broke to work; 41 head of cultivators coming in soon; 10 head of shoveling boards with scoop by side; 8 Plano mares and 120 rods of canvas belting, better than new; De Laval cow with ice cream attachment; short-horn corn planter with ten feet of wire; 1 McCormick binder with foal; 1 Poland China bob sled with runners on it; 34 head of chickens in perfect working order, good as new and many other articles belonging to other folks too numerous to mention.

A Button in Collection
 Many amusing stories of life in Eton school in England are told in Shant Leslie's book, "The End of the Chapter." For instance, when one of the masters found a button in the chapel collection, which he read out in terms of pounds, shillings and pence, "and one trouser button!" proceeding immediately with the words of the service, "Rend your hearts and not your garments." Another good one concerns a young nobleman's son who introduced himself as Lord C., son of Earl C.—The whole house kicked him twice, once for Lord C— and once for Earl C. The latter story the author caps by one from Harrow, where a foreign prince at the school was once mentioned as a candidate for the Spanish throne. The poor boy had to be removed, as half of the school took the necessary steps to be able to boast afterward that they had kicked a king of Spain.—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Unpopular English Official
 Lord Northcliffe at a Washington luncheon was talking about the British premier. "Mr. Lloyd-George is the idol of the nation now," he said. "It is hard to believe how unpopular he was, at least among the unionists, once. Among the many stories circulated about Mr. Lloyd-George's unpopularity at that time there was one which concerned a rescue from drowning. The heroic rescuer, when a gold medal was presented to him for his brave deed, modestly declared: 'I don't deserve this medal. I did nothing but my duty. I saw our friend here struggling in the water. I knew he must drown unless some one saved him. So I plunged in, swam out to him, turned him over to make sure it wasn't Lloyd-George, and then I jugged him to safety on my back.'"

To the Police Station
 Bounderby was a most respected resident of the suburb and made friends with everybody. As he was putting up for the borough council he made a tour of various municipal establishments, including the local police station. The superintendent had treated him with great courtesy, and had shown him everything of interest, on which Bounderby dilated when he reached home. Next day he was taking his little son for a ride on the trolley car, which was crowded with loyal residents. As the car was passing the police station a shrill voice suddenly cried: "Oh, dad! Is that the police station where the policeman took you last night?" Every person on the car turned to start at Bounderby—and he was not elected to the council.

May and December Wed Again
 The old millionaire and his beautiful bride, after their quiet wedding, had a quiet wedding breakfast a deux. Astrakhan caviar, eggs pompadour, a truffled chicken, fresh California peas, champagne—so the quiet breakfast ran. "My dear," said the old millionaire, as the fruit course, a superb Florida melon, came on, "tell me, dear"—and he laid his withered hand on her young one—"do you love me for what I am or for what I was?" The beautiful girl smiled down from the window into the admiring eyes of a young clubman who was passing; then she bent her clear, considering gaze on the gray ruin opposite and replied: "I love you, George, for what you will be."

Contempt of Court
 A certain man whose previous record was of the best was charged with a minor offense. Law and evidence were unquestionably on the side of the defense, but when the arguments had been concluded a verdict of "guilty" was given and a fine imposed. The lawyer for the defense was sitting with his back toward the magistrate. Without changing his position or rising to address the court he remarked: "Judge, please fine me for contempt of court." The magistrate inquired: "What d'ye mean, sir? You haven't committed contempt." "I have," came from the old lawyer. "It's silent."

A Seasick Irishman
 Murphy was making his first trip across the Atlantic, and he felt un-speakably awful. He failed to connect the fact of his being on the briny ocean for the first time with his agony. The doctor came to him as he tossed about in his berth. "Cheer up man," he said heartily. "I know you're feeling rotten, but you're not going to die." Murphy opened horrified eyes. "Not going to die?" he wailed. "Faith, doctor, I thought I was! That was the only thing that kept me alive."

Money Not Main Object.
 "All healthily minded people like making money—ought to like it and enjoy the sensation of winning it; but the main object of their life is not money. A good soldier, for instance, mainly wishes to do his fighting well. He is glad of his pay—very properly so, and justly grumbles when you keep him ten years without it—still, his main notion of life is to win battles, not to be paid for winning them."—John Ruskin.

SOLDIER BOYS PASS THROUGH HERE

Two Trainloads of Men Enroute From Pacific to Atlantic Coast Make Brief Stop in Alliance

Two train loads of soldier boys, enroute from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast, passed through Alliance last Friday afternoon, each train making short stops here in order to take on a stock of supplies and make change of crews and engines.

The first train arrived about 1 o'clock and those in charge assembled the men in order and gave them a short drill about town, to the intense delight of many spectators.

The men all seemed to be very light hearted and cheerful—and how could anyone blame them, if at all their stops here are received as cheerfully as they were here? The young ladies of the city made it a point to entertain them as best they could. There was hand-shaking and kisses, and when the trains moved away many "good-byes and good luck."

These men represented a portion of the draft army of southern California, and have been in training about two months.

DIPHTHERIA CASES ARE WELL ISOLATED

Recent Diphtheria Cases Cause Adoption of "Safety First" Measures for Adequate Protection

Following the discovery of diphtheria in the Burlington hotel some time ago, a few other cases have been discovered about the city. As announced last week, a case of the same was found at the J. B. Irwin home, among the roomers at the place, and still another case, that of a child in one of the schools, was found on Friday of last week.

Accordingly, the Central and Emerson schools were dismissed for a few days until the proper steps could be taken for the fumigation of the buildings. At this time, however, both schools have re-opened and work therein has been resumed.

The Burlington Hotel has also resumed business, as the building has been thoroughly cleansed and fumigated.

In each case of sickness the patient has been removed to the city hospital where they are receiving the care and isolation that is necessary.

The precaution that has been adopted thus far by the authorities will, it is believed, avoid any further spread of the malady at this time.

For better food at less cost

MAZOLA

BUTTER, lard and suet have been used for years for deep frying, sautéing or shortening—because the housewife could find nothing better. Today the Food Administrator asks her to use vegetable oils.

And Mazola, the pure oil from corn holds first place among vegetable oils. It is the ideal medium for sautéing, deep frying, shortening and salad dressings from every standpoint.

Mazola reaches cooking heat long before it smokes—cooks food more quickly and at the same time more thoroughly. This does away with that soggy and greasiness so prevalent with the old cooking mediums.

And Mazola can be used over and over again because it does not transmit taste or odor from one food to another!

That is what makes it so wonderfully economical.

Get a can of Mazola from your grocer today. Sold in pint, quart, half-gallon and gallon tins—the large sizes give greatest economy. Also ask for the free Mazola Book of Recipes or write us direct.

Your money refunded if Mazola does not give entire satisfaction.
