

"FRONTIER DAYS" TO BE GREATEST SINCE FOUNDING OF CELEBRATED SHOW

BEAUTIFUL CITY OF CHEYENNE WILL BE SCENE OF A GREAT CELEBRATION LATTER PART OF THIS MONTH —"DADDY OF THEM ALL"

The Herald live stock editor recently made a trip through Wyoming, visiting the beautiful capital city. While there he learned from the secretary of the Cheyenne Industrial Club and others something of the preparations that are being made for a great blowout at the twenty-third annual Frontier Days celebration, which is to be held July 23, 24, 25 and 26, 1919.

This event will surpass any other show of a similar nature ever held, so they say. Other towns have imitated the exemplification of pioneer life in the west, but the Cheyenne show is "the daddy of them all", and this year's exhibition promises to excel all previous efforts.

A Beautiful City
Cheyenne is a small city for the capital of a great state, not much larger than Grand Island, Nebr., but it is one of the most beautiful in the middle west. Situated as it is on an almost treeless plain, the visitor is surprised at the magnificent parks, well-kept lawns and the many large trees that line the streets and surround the residences.

At the foot of Capitol avenue is the massive stone station of the Union Pacific railroad. The depot park, although small, is a veritable beauty spot. Less than a mile up the avenue stands the state house, a model of neatness and surrounded by a remarkably pretty lawn. Fort D. A. Russell, adjacent to the city and connected by electric line, is one of a number of places of interest easily accessible.

A Big Show and a Big Crowd.
The managers of the Frontier Day celebration this year are planning to put on the biggest show yet of the kind and are expecting one of the biggest crowds ever seen in that city. Secretary T. Joe Cahill of the committee has announced that some of the world's greatest performers will be on deck to give the people of Cheyenne, as well as the many visitors, a show that will be worth coming far to see. Secretary Cahill has summoned the best talent in the world for the coming celebration. Broncho busters, lariat throwers and bulldogging experts, together with scores of other wild west performers, will give the visitors the wildest and wooliest program of programs.

The aggregation of cowboys, cowgirls, and Indians who are to be the principal actors was swelled when Secretary Cahill announced that Red Farrell, said to be the champion rough rider of the northwest, had signified his intention of entering the games. Leonard Stroud, last year's champion, will probably clash with Farrell for supremacy in the Cheyenne celebration.

Since the Frontier games last year Stroud has entered scores of contests and has won practically every one in which he has entered. Farrell has won all events in Canada and the Northwest since the fall of 1918 and has yet to meet his master.

John Murrah of Lakewood, New Mexico, in a letter to Secretary Cahill states that ten of the best ropers in New Mexico will be on hand to win laurels for that state.

Tommy Grimes and Johnny Judd, two old timers in the local celebration, have just been mustered out of federal service, and write that they will be at Cheyenne to show their wares. These men are riders, ropers and in fact can do all stunts to good advantage.

Skeeter Bill Robbins of Douglas, Wyoming, Dorothy Morrell of Salinas, California, are two more stars who are well known who will be on deck for the performance.

Joe Gardner of El Paso, Tex., who has taken part in exhibitions in South America, Canada and the United States, will probably be seen in action here. He has a record of 24 1/2 seconds for hogtying a steer. Gardner allows a steer a sixty foot start before he makes after it and catches it with his educated rope.

Sam Garrett, who hails from Mulhall, Okla., is thinking seriously of attending the title games. Garrett has a unique record as a roper. One of his feature stunts is roping five horses with a single rope.

JOHN ROBB NOW WITH DONAHUE-RANDALL & CO.

Former Chief Brand Inspector Accepts Position With Well Known Live Stock Commission Firm.

What is one person's loss is sometimes another's gain. This is the case in the change made this season from the brand inspector's force at the Omaha market to a well-known commission firm.

John Robb, formerly chief brand inspector, is now with Donahue-Randall & Company, live stock commission men. Mr. Robb's efficiency as a brand inspector is known to a large number of ranchmen of Nebraska and adjoining states who have been shipping to the Omaha market in recent years. He will be missed from the position which he formerly occupied but not from the market.

In his new position with Donahue-Randall & Company, he will act as brand man, work for which he is exceptionally well qualified, and also as assistant cattle salesman.
