The FAMOUS
Famous for Quality

—Editor Coler of the Sidney Enterprise, in company with G. W. Reed of Wilsonville, Neb., made The Herald a short visit on Monday of this week. Earlier in the day, Mrs. Reed had a rather unpleasant experience with gentleman, who, though undeniably gallant, was more than slightly intoxicated. Companions interfered and dragged the boozehound into seclusion immediately, if not sooner. In spite of all this, Mr. Reed had a good many pleasant things to say of Alliance.

—Despite the fact that there is a serious shortage of houses in the city at the present time, the impression should not be given that there is nothing being done to relieve conditions. It developed at the Monday evening meeting of the directors of the Alliance Community club that fifty new houses have been built in Alliance during the past year, and at the present time there are thirty-five more under process of construction or remodeling. The fact is that the city is growing so rapidly that even greater building activity than normal is unable to keep pace with the demand.

—For some time the merchants of the city have believed that a merchant policeman, who would make the rounds of the business district at night, would be a valuable addition to the city's police force. They had discussed paying his salary out of a fund collected from the merchants themselves. The matter was discussed by the board of directors of the Alliance Community club at its Monday meeting, who favored the idea, but believed that such an official should be hired by the city. City Manager Smith has announced, it is said, that a merchant policeman will be added to the department, and the name of the appointee will doubtless be made known before long.

—It is the desire of the present publishers of The Herald to publish all the news that is available. We hope soon to have a correspondent located in all the towns in this territory. We will esteem it a great favor if any Herald subscriber who would like to take up the duty of sending us a weekly news letter, would let us know his or her name without delay, or if you know of someone who would be willing to undertake the work, or whom you think is well fitted to do it, send in the name. We'll do our best to persuade him. Again, if you live in Alliance, and know of any news item, no matter whether you think it important or not, use the telephone. We're honestly glad to get any kind of a news item, and we will appreciate it. Its news that makes a newspaper, and especially in these days when we're getting acquainted, every little bit counts.

—The first Friday in November of each year has been set apart by the legislature as "state fire day." The state fire marshal, E. D. Beach, has renamed the day "Fire Prevention day," and is making plans to have every school in the state prepare special exercises to mark the occasion. A circular letter was mailed a few days ago to all the county superintendents in the state, enclosing a copy of a book entitled, "Safeguarding the Home Against Fire." Instruction of this kind given to the children cannot fail to have a beneficial effect. Few people have any idea of the immense property loss caused by fires, a large proportion of which could have been prevented by the adoption of simple protective measures, which in most cases means simply common sense. For the state of Nebraska, from January 1, 1919, to September 1, 1919, a total of eight months, no less than 571 fires were reported, with a loss exceeding half a million dollars. This does not include the Omaha fires of last week, which will raise the total by more than a million and a half. Nine lives have been lost in fires so far in 1919. Friday, November 7, is the date set for Fire Prevention day this year, and it is to be hoped that all public, private and parochial schools will lend their co-operation to a movement that is important to every person living within the state, and a good number who live elsewhere.

—Judge Tash enjoyed the opportunity last week to have a pleasant visit with his son, Charles Tash, who was discharged from the army some months ago, but who has been so busy since then that he has been unable to find time to make a visit home. He is in the employ of an automobile concern in Omaha, and was making a trip through the western part of the state, and when he reached Rushville made a quick dash toward Alliance. Charles Tash, after several attempts to enlist, wherein he was turned down for physical reasons, was finally inducted into the service and within a few weeks was in France. He made a sergeant in the Eighty-ninth division, and there is one story which concerns his first guard duty in France and the passing by of General Pershing which ought to be told, but which the judge can tell so much better than we can that we're going to forego the pleasure. Later, he was selected as one of two men from his company, the other being his captain, to get right into action with the Rainbow division, the Forty-second, then as Chateau Thierry, the idea being that these two men should learn of actual fighting and later go back to their company and serve as instructors. Neither of them were able to go back to the company, however, for his captain was wounded and Tash himself was gassed, so severely that he spent twenty-one days in the hospital. He arrived back in the United States some weeks ago and went right back to his old position in Omaha. His week-end visit home was greatly enjoyed by his parents, who, although they watched the war news pretty carefully, knew nothing of his participation in the Chateau Thierry battle or of his being gassed until it was all over and he had returned to this country.

—Wednesday morning Judge Tash united in marriage James H. Hinchliff and Mrs. Florence Miller, both of Antioch.

—License to wed was issued to James J. Lourida and Miss Mary Peale, both of whom are from Denver, Wednesday morning, and Judge Tash performed the ceremony.

—Join Kelly of Central City is spending a few days in Alliance looking after some 480 acres of land that he owns in this vicinity. A whole lot of men from that part of the state have invested in Box Butte county real estate, and the end is not yet, by a long sight.

—Sunday afternoon the police made a little raid on a crap game that was being scientifically conducted between the city electric light plant and the coal chutes, and three craphooters, all colored, were placed under arrest. They gave the names of Henry Curl, Gene Curry and John Bowser, and two of them said that their home was in East St. Louis. The trio were fined $10 and costs on Monday. The latter two were allowed to go back to work, and later appeared and paid their fines, but the other was held because he attempted to make a getaway, being restrained by Chief Reed's large and powerful six-shooter.

—C. W. Bulger of Arcadia, Neb., arrived in the city Monday and is spending a few days in the Alliance Hotel. Mr. Bulger, ten or twelve years ago, was editor of the Arcadia Champion, graduating therefrom into the real estate business, whither so many editors have been drifting of late.

—Two gentlemen of color, who gave their names as Alec Green and Ray Whitesides, and their residence as East St. Louis, were taken in tow by the police last Saturday and were fined $5 and costs on a vagrancy charge by Police Judge Roberts. There wasn't money enough between the pair to pay the bill, and they are now working out their fines. The city, by the way, makes an allowance of 20 cents per hour or $2 for a ten-hour day, and it won't be long before these men are on their way.

—Apparently it pays to belong to the Community club, aside from the feeling of satisfaction that you are doing your full share—or a little more than your share—to make your city a better place to live in and a place that other people will be glad to come to. This week, an inquiry came to the club's secretary from a real estate agent in the east who has two clients who are in the market for twenty-five thousand acres each of Box Butte county land. Every real estate dealer who is a member of the Community club has been put in touch with that man and has an opportunity to make a sale and a tidy commission.

No Red Tape. No Delay. Plenty of Funds

On Sept. 9, 1919, The Federal Land Bank of Omaha declared another dividend of 6 per cent for the first half of the year 1919. This dividend is now being distributed among the borrowers, because all the stock is owned by the borrowers and all the profits belong to the borrowers.

The system is truly co-operative and loans are made at a lower rate and on more favorable terms than with any other loan concern in the country.

The Federal Land Bank of Omaha is the only institution authorized by the Federal Government to make Farm Loans in the State of Nebraska on the co-operative plan.

S. C. Soules. Mr. Smith is a young lad of most pleasing personality, who has seen service through a large part of the war, enlisting in Toronto when he was under age, and seeing twenty-one months of service in France, besides considerable service elsewhere, week and is paying a most pleasant visit at the home of his grandfather. His regiment was the 127th, known as the Twelfth York Rangers, and incidentally as the "Bloody Rangers." He was in a number of the important engagements of the war, but went through all of them unscathed, with the exception of being slightly gassed. He was gassed, not in battle, but in seeking shelter in a shell hole in which one of the gas bombs had been thrown. Not knowing the presence of gas in the hole, he neglected to put on his helmet, and as a result got a trip to the hospital and an opportunity to recuperate in the Derby hills, which he says is one of the finest spots on earth for that purpose. Mr. Smith was discharged within a few days after the signing of the armistice. He likes this country so well that his present plans are to stay here if he can find employment, and inasmuch as he is experienced, that ought not to be a difficult thing to find.

—The October issue of The Tradesman, a business journal for retail merchants, published at Omaha, in its discussion of local advertisements, has complimentary words for the quality of the newspaper advertisements of two Alliance merchants, that of W. R. Harper and the Fashion Shop. A noteworthy feature connected with this is that both of the ads were put into type by The Herald force. With our recent purchase of several hundred dollars' worth of new type, both for ad and job work, The Herald adroom is able to make the advertisements of Alliance merchants equal in typographical appearance to the quality of the copy furnished us.

—M. P. Tully of the National Optical house in Denver was in Alliance Tuesday on business.
