Calvin J. Wildy, filed his petition in

COMMUNITY CLUB GIVES BANQUET FOR JUDGE HEWITT

(Continued from Page 1.) the question was one for the legislative branch rather than the constitutional convention, although it might place such limitations on taxation as would bring about the desired effect.

Judge Hewitt then discussed the problems that would be brought up at the convention. He told of some court, and limit the cases that may bare feet. reasons why a new constitution was needed. The present document, written in a day when the people were considerably fearful of officials and rather economical in general, ditional district judges would be a contains a number of limitations, rather expensive proposition. Ansome of which are rather humorous when considered in the light of pres- difficult to find sufficient material of ent conditions. For example, the constitution expressly states that the attorney general and the state superintendent of public instruction cannot have a clerk, and it has taken citizens. a decision by the supreme court, which has ruled that a stenographer is not a clerk, to get around this provision, adopted in the days when neither office had very much to do. Other instances may be found in the low salary limit set for the governor, $2,500, to get around which it has been necessary to have the legislature allow an additional sum for maintenance of the governor's mansion. The salary limit on other state offices is too low, also, Mr. Hewitt declared. He believed that these salaries would be raised to such an extent that really good men could afford to give teir time to the business of the state.

The most radical changes that have been proposed, Mr. Hewitt said, concern the legislature and the handle its business without need for courts. There are three chief suggestions which affect the legislature, one being to do away with that body altogether and substitute therefor a commission, similar to the city commission plan, with both legislative and executive powers. Another suggestion is to do away with the senate, and at the same time do away with all the logrolling and trading that goes on now. A third plan provides for having a smaller legislature, and keeping it constantly in session. It is altogether likely that than $100 might not be appealed to some changes will be made in the legislature, Mr. Hewitt thought, but Judge would certify that a question he was in doubt as to which of the of law was involved which would reproposed plans, if any, had sufficient quire a decision by the supreme on his home. backing to secure the support of the judges. convention.

F. A. Bald made the suggestion htat one way out of the difficulty would be to increase the jurisdiction of the present county courts. This would mean, of course, that the standards would have to be raised. It is not requisite, at the present time, for a county judge to be a member of the bar. But with proper care in the selection of county judges, increased salary, jurisdiction and responsibility, the county court could be made to take its proper place in the judicial scale. Mr. Bald said that with the right kind of county courts, the present district courts could then be made a sort of appellate court, with limitations on the cases that might be appealed. Thus, the supreme court would be able to assistance.

Judge Tash was quoted as saying that county courts should be authorized to accept a plea of guilty and impose sentence. As it is now, even though a prisoner is willing to plead guilty, the county must board him until such time as the district judge sentence.

Judge Berry mentioned the fact that in Iowa, a case involving less the supreme court unless the trial
