

SHOW YOUR GOOD WILL

The annual sale of Red Cross seals is now on. The intention is to raise a fund of $6,500,000 to carry on a campaign during 1920 against the great white plague. The annual death toll in the United States from tuberculosis is 150,000 persons.

Much of the work of the Christmas sales will be done by women. Government reports show that literally thousands of children fall victims to tuberculosis, which frequently advances into tuberculosis meningitis, causing death. The powers of resistance against disease germs can be built up by fresh air, sunshine and good food. Care of children is fundamentally woman's business.

American women have responded to appeals for aid for Belgian babies, Armenian babies, French babies, all children of stricken countries everywhere have been clothed and comforted by American mothers and big sisters.

America, too, is a stricken country, for more than 12,000 little ones die each year from a disease that could be prevented. Unlike the monster of war, with its roar and apparent awfulness, disease creeps too often silently and unsuspected upon its victim. The dry cough neglected becomes incurable.

With the return of the Christmas-tide a bit of good will toward men will be manifested by a generous investment in the cheerful little Red Cross seals. Why not use them on your parcels in place of others that aid only in the revenue of the manufacturer and dealer?

Red Cross Christmas seals only cost one cent each. Buy today and again tomorrow. You will be happier and add to the happiness of others.

It's pretty hard to get away with it. A lot of police officers aren't the most intelligent people in the world, and a good many crooks are pretty bright, but the man who is able to continue a life of crime without being caught, sooner or later, is a scarce article. Take the case of Bill Carlyle, who escaped from the Wyoming penitentiary a few days ago. Bill was evidently a crook who was gifted with a little better than the average intelligence, but it didn't take very long to get him. The best of them finally slip up somewhere.

$2.00 a year—and worth more.

Children the World Over Love Candy

And it's the most natural craving on earth. For candy is healthful and nutritious, as well as delicious.

Provided, of course, it's pure candy.

Why not safeguard the youngsters on candy as you do on their daily food? Buy chocolates and candies that are ALWAYS good, pure and wholesome—that if eaten in daily moderation, will build them up as much as their meat and bread and milk.

Look for the bright gold Brecht Shield, the unblemished Sign of Good Candy—it's your—and your children's—protection every day in the year.

Give the youngsters a Brecht Candy treat this Christmas—it will make you happy to watch them enjoy it.
