DROPPING BOMBS UPON THE BANDITS

The British have learned much from the inventiveness of our marines in Haiti. It will be remembered that the marines found that it was a vast saving of shoe leather and God's patience to not follow on foot after the bands of robbers. The ingenious "leathernecks" are equal to every occasion and every climate, and have devised a much better way, says the National Tribune. They took possession of old iron pipes, filled them with a high explosive to which was attached a fuse, and then dropped these directly into the robber nest from airplanes. The quieting effect upon the robbers was magical. Their hidden strongholds in the mountains were no longer impregnable and no marine had to sacrifice his life by being ambushed in the narrow passes. The British have for years had trouble with the Afghanistan tribes who have raided the more peaceful lowlands. Of late these have been very annoying to the British trains. The British have now started airplanes flying over the retreats of the banditti, dropping bombs upon them.

The United States treasury department has issued a new statement relative to government insurance based on the liberal provisions of the recent law passed by congress in favor of ex-service men. This provides that soldiers, sailors, and marines who have allowed their government life insurance to lapse, may reinstate at any time before July 1, 1920, if the insured man can show that he is in as good health as at the date of last payment. This will give an opportunity to those men who have been out of service more than eighteen months who have not kept up their premiums and to those whose payments have lapsed for over eleven months to renew their government insurance.

LIBERAL PROVISIONS FOR REINSTATEMENT

A previous statement giving December 31, 1919, as the last date for re-application is hereby cancelled. Home service sections of the American Red Cross have received full information from the bureau of war risk insurance relating to reinstatement and conversion of insurance, with detailed instructions concerning the exchange of one form of policy for another at a lower rate of premium. The local office of the Red Cross is supplied with reinstatement and conversion application blanks, printed instructions and lists of premium rates and the home service secretary, Josephine Hanson, will gladly give information and assistance to ex-service men and their families. Visit us in the court house.

HIS RECEPTION

"No one," says a Louisville man, "can more effectually take the wind out of a fellow's sails than an old-time leasurely Kentuckian. After fifteen years' absence, during which I had graduated at a university, got my name in the papers a few times, and bought many articles of fine raiment, I went to the little town in Kentucky where I had been a poor but ambitious youth. Now it was my expectation that a reception committee would be on hand to greet me, but nothing of the sort happened. Observing the grandeur of my clothes, however, and my general prosperous air, my old acquaintances came around and shook hands quite cordially, all except old Henry Miles, who kept the general store. Old Henry sat back of the stove, handy to the sawdust box. He seemed not to notice me in the least. I was piqued—angry, in fact. I walked up to the old chap and stood right in front of him, so that he could not fall to see me in all my glory. Slowly, casually, old Henry looked up from under the flap of his old white hat, and remarked: "Clarence, you have been away somewhere, haven't you?"

One editor says it used to be customary to grease the bucksaw with a bacon rind; now it is cheaper to throw away the saw and buy a new one.

Bill Ayton says the reason he buys strong cigars is because they don't break so easy in his pockets.—Buckshot.

MINSTREL SHOW IN COUNTY COURT

(Continued from page 1) use Judge Tash as the lay figure in the tableau. The judge remarked that he could get a better idea of the affair if she would illustrate on Mr. Basye. Mr. Basye then suggested that she use Mr. Gantz as assistant demonstrator. Mr. Gantz demurring, the young lady gave a vivid explanation, swatting the open air with tremendous effect. The judge declared he had a perfect picture of the scene in his mind's eye, and the witness was excused.

Mrs. English, with a wealth of detail, then retold the story. The story was quite similar to that told by Miss Foster, but the phraseology was a trifle different. When she came to the bottle episode, Mr. Gantz inquired if they were pop bottles. "No, sir," she replied, "they were quarts."

The attorney for the defense interposed a wealth of objections to the testimony as introduced, and these objections were promptly overruled by Judge Tash, who said that not only was he able to sift out the facts from the testimony, but that he wanted to hear the full story. There was a clash or two between the opposing attorneys.

In one of these, Mr. Basye remarked: "Address your objections to the court."

The judge thanked the attorneys for their courtesy in permitting him to take part in the trial. After this grateful acknowledgement, Mr. Gantz explained that all he desired was to prevent Mr. Basye from acting both as prosecutor and judge.

Mr. Gantz, in his argument, admitted that an assault had been committed, but denied that any proof had been shown of intent to do great bodily injury. The county attorney rose to reply, but Judge Tash motioned him to his seat.

"Sit down, Mr. Basye," he said; "I'm going to make your speech for you." The judge said that inasmuch as an assault had been committed, he could deduce the intent to do great bodily injury from the testimony. "I believe," he said, "that Brown's motive was jealousy. He objected to the fact that Miss Foster was attractive to other men. He intended to slash her face and injure her personal beauty, so that she would not be attractive to other colored gentlemen. But for the effective interference of Mrs. English, he would have succeeded."

The judge held, first, that an offense had been committed, and second, that there was sufficient evidence of intent to do great bodily injury. He directed that Brown be held for trial at the May term of district court, and placed the amount of the appearance bond at $500, which was not furnished. Brown was committed to jail in default of bail.

METHODIST CHURCH

Our Sunday school has grown until at the present time we have twenty classes, and each class has a regular, well-qualified teacher, besides two superintendents and other officers necessary. Several new classes have been started this conference year, and if the school keeps on growing at the present rate, until we enter the new church building, we will have one of the largest schools among Methodist churches of western Nebraska. The banner next Sunday will be awarded to the class having the largest number who can repeat the ten commandments.

It will be of interest to the community to know that the plans for the new church building are progressing nicely. The architect is at work on the plans and specifications, the brick and tile have been ordered,
