ette, or even at the church festival? I repeat, he is a real devotee of the light irresistible. It devolves upon you to keep that light bright. Whether he lets it become his inspiration or his demoralization is a responsibility which he must assume. Of course, the moral is, if the moth does not want to be singed it must keep away from the candle. I have noticed very few wise moths.

Anyway, the matter of beautiful eyes is really important. Too many women unintentionally abuse their eyes. Lines, puffs and wrinkles are not attractive frames for eyes of any color.

The chances are that you have merely caused an impairment of the chemical constitution of the blood or an impoverishment of the system by too much reading, over-study, lack of sleep, or dissipation of one kind or another.

A little turpentine liniment may be rubbed into the skilled charmer openly "vamps" him skin daily, or weak ammonia-one part to four of water-but care must be taken not to let either get into the eyes. Styes are usually the result of an impoverished condition of the system.

You can exercise your eyes, the same as any other part of your body, by looking slowly around as far to the right as possible, then to the left, then upward, then down without moving the head and each time coming back to the position of "eyes front."

In letting the light of your eyes shine, don't get the idea that I advise going into training as a "vamp." All you need do is cultivate a lovely character and then let your eyes clearly express that character. They will do their part without any effort on yours. Never trust a person who 800. avoids looking you in the eye. A clear, steady eye is said to be a good sign, while a shifting, constantly moving eye is the reverse.

I have read that yellowish eyes generally denote a passionate nature; that the natural coquette has deep blue eyes; eyes with a greenish hue are usually jealous, and gray eyes denote keen intelligence. Brown eyes are supposed to belong to a kind, happy temperament, and black eyes to an intensely loving nature.

Phrenologists say that these general attributes are controlled to a considerable degree by other features, so this interpretation of green, blue and brown signal lights may not be considered entirely infallible.

Inquisitive eyes that suddenly grow warm when they look at you are not to be trusted to any great extent. Such persons are usually much more interested in their own concerns than they are in you. They will only cultivate you for their own betterment.

When you laugh do not cultivate the habit of wrinkling up your eyes more than necessary. Little by little such a habit will be sure to produce innumerable small lines and wrinkles that will appear long before age demands their appearance. The reason that the eyes of screen stars appear more attractive than those of other women is because they have trained their eyes to express, not hide, their emotions. They are told to open their eyes wide and keep them open. If your eye-lashes or brows are thin and indistinct it does no harm and improves the appearance immensely to pencil them slightly, providing the penciling is not apparent. It can be done so well that even your closest friends will not detect it. The lashes and brows add much to the expression of the eyes and should not be neglected.

Vaseline will improve them. Using a brush on the brows will make them smooth and even. Don't begin the practice of cutting and shaping them unless it seems necessary. Ultimately the process will make them stiff and heavy.

No doubt every man whose wife reads what I have written about eyes will yearn to change the color of my eyes, but distance lends safety as well as enchantment so I shall continue the even tenor of my way, even if he does misquote the poet's verse and say:

'The light that lies in women's eyes And lies and lies, and lies and lies."
