ORDINANCE NO. 278

An Ordinance requiring a permit preliminary to erecting or adding to any building within the corporate limits of the City of Alliance, to the value of One Hundred Dollars or upward; providing for the issuance of such permit; prescribing the form of application therefor, fixing a license fee therefor; providing for a report upon the completion of the work for which a permit is issued, and providing a penalty for its violation.

Be It Ordained, by the Mayor and Council of the City of Alliance, Nebraska:

Section 1. That any person, persons, company, association, or corporation intending to erect or add to any building within the corporate limits of the City of Alliance, Nebraska, to the value of One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or upward, shall make and file in the office of the City Clerk a written application upon a blank to be provided therefor by the City Clerk, designating the kind of building he proposes to erect or the kind of addition he proposes to erect to a building, the material to be used in erecting or adding to such building, the location, size, and site of the proposed building or addition and the estimated cost thereof.

Section 2. That upon the filing of such a written application, the City Clerk shall issue to the person, persons, company, association or corporation filing such written application, a building permit granting permission to erect or add to such building, and particularly stating the material to be used in erecting or adding to such building, and the location, size, and site of the proposed building or addition. The City Clerk shall charge for issuing such permit the sum of One Dollar ($1.00) for each and every such permit, to be paid in advance by the applicant applying therefor.

Section 3. That any person, persons, company, association or corporation receiving a permit as is provided in this Ordinance, shall, within thirty days after the completion of the work for which such permit shall be issued, file in the office of the City Clerk a written statement that such work has been completed, a statement of the material used in erecting or adding to such building, and the location, size and site of the building erected or added to, and the actual cost of erecting, or adding to such building.

Section 4. That the City Clerk shall keep a record of all permits issued and reports of completion filed in accordance with the provisions of this ordinance.

Section 5. That it shall be unlawful for any person, persons, company, association, or corporation, to erect or add to any building within the corporate limits of the City of Alliance, Nebraska, to the value of One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or upward, without first procuring from the City Clerk the building permit provided for in this ordinance, and that it shall be unlawful for any person, persons, company, association or corporation to erect or add to any building within the corporate limits of the City of Alliance, Nebraska, to the value of One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or upward, after procuring a building permit as provided for in this ordinance, in any other manner than is provided by the permit so issued.

Section 6. That any person violating the provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than Five Dollars ($5.00) nor more than One Hundred Dollars ($100.00), and stand committed to the City Jail until such fine and the costs of prosecution be paid or otherwise discharged according to law.

Section 7. That all ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith be, and they hereby are, repealed.

Section 8. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage, approval and publication according to law.

Passed and Approved this 13th day of April, 1920.

A. D. RODGERS, Mayor.
Attest: GRACE H. KENNEDY,
(Seal) City Clerk.

JUST PIE

By ALICE PIERCE.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In these days when the average edition of a city daily contains in one column such a startling item as the successful flight of an airplane across the ocean and in the next records the safe delivery of a deceased aunt's remains to Mr. Blank, of Blanktown, via parcel post, at the trifling cost of forty-three cents, we are compelled to describe Phoebe Hurlburt as an anachronism.

Long ago, when the whalers set sail from the little port, Phoebe's grandmother made most wonderful pies. Phoebe makes them just as delectable—and by the same recipe. Not the most noted man of science can suggest one improvement in the pies the old New England housewives concocted. Phoebe didn't try, and therein lay her success.

Phoebe Hurlburt occupied a place in the sun not too close to forty at the time her romance began. Cousin Jane was close behind. Jane had all along intended it to be her own romance; but, somehow, in the last act the cues got twisted and John Bellayre walked into the Hurlburt kitchen where Phoebe, in an immaculate calico house-dress, was in the act of removing from the oven two crispy, fragrant apple pies, instead of into the orchard where Jane had staged herself in an act worthy of Belasco himself. John stayed in the kitchen to have a sample, served with clotted cream, and stayed so long that finally Jane, all unassisted, climbed down from the tree in which she was precariously seated.

It had been along about Christmas time when Jane met John Bellayre. He had been the guest of honor at a so-called Sunday morning breakfast party. As a matter of fact both "morning" and "breakfast" were misnomers, for the guests assembled at one o'clock, and what they had to eat was a rather elaborate luncheon. Jane had written her country cousin all about it and had kept her informed of the progress of the friendship. Jane liked to be called "clever," and it was with that adjective that the other women present at the breakfast described her manipulation of John Bellayre. But to do Jane justice she was an attractive woman, and Bellayre didn't need much managing to drift into a close friendship.

Phoebe usually listened in on the conversations, now and then surprising everybody by putting in a brightly intelligent comment in exactly the right place. She presided over the household, cool, competent, immaculate. But to all invitations to visit in the city she returned a polite but final declination. She didn't like cities.

It was here in the charming old New England village that Jane had planned that the crowning event of her life should take place. John Bellayre was dramatic critic for one of the city dailies. He knew many desirable people and he was himself an extremely likable man. Jane calculated that her oft-repeated statement that she would not give up her freedom before she reached the age of thirty-five would help, rather than hinder. Men preferred to have some obstacles to overcome—it tickled their masculine vanity.

It didn't suggest itself to Jane to take into consideration the fine sense of values which a dramatic critic must possess to take him high in his profession. It never occurred to her that she looked as an orchid would were it used in the stage setting of the "Old Homestead." She merely noted casually that John seemed to enjoy sitting on the veranda where Phoebe was always to be found in the afternoon with her crocheting. He would sit there lazily by the hour, hardly speaking at all. Jane usually spent those hours in rest.

On the last evening of her guests' stay some restless impulse, foreign to her placid nature, drove Phoebe to the kitchen. She explained to her mother that it promised to be hot tomorrow, and so she guessed she would do some baking before she went to bed. She had heard Jane's words to John Bellayre as her cousin went upstairs directly after the early supper. "I have some notes to write, John; I will meet you in the orchard at half-past seven." Then, at seven, she had seen her cousin steal out of the side door arrayed in a pale mauve gown, one Phoebe had never seen before and which struck her as almost indecent in its daring simplicity.

John Bellayre caught a whiff of the fragrant odor of steaming apple pie as he started down the path toward the orchard. Without in the least analyzing his own motives, he retraced his steps, opened the kitchen door and walked in.

If it is true that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, it is equally true that every woman is at heart a born flirt—even the most placid. Anyway, when Jane returned to the house, after maintaining to no purpose her precarious position in the apple tree, when it had grown too dark for the simple lines of her mauve gown to show to their best advantage against the green of the tree, she found John Bellayre and Cousin Phoebe seated side by side on the kitchen steps, planning for the future—together!

When a mutual friend asked Jane rather frankly, some time later, what there was about that country cousin of hers to interest such a brilliant critic as John Bellayre, Jane answered, rather sarcastically, we must admit: "Just us."
