Random Shots

Was it Dr. Anderson or Dr. Jones?

Here's something from one of those pep artists: "A lazy man isn't any worse than a dead man, but he takes up more room."

Some day Jesse Holmes, official fool-killer, will get that man.

Can you imagine anything worse than having no time to fish when it's fishing time?

A tall, gangling lad came up to one of the railroad men. He stood around for five or ten minutes, first on one foot and then the other, looking as though he hoped somebody would notice him. Finally he was perceived. "Mister," he asked, "is it against the law to shoot firecrackers in this town?"

We have discovered the city's prize boob. In fact, Romeo hasn't anything at all on him. All unconscious he was, right in the doorway of his employer's place of business, spraying perfume on his necktie, stopping to sniff at it occasionally to see if the odor was sufficient.

From now on, we refuse to criticize the fair sex.

Some heathen miscreant (probably the preacher is thinking worse things than that about him) desecrated the downtown bulletin board of the Methodists during race meet by opening it up and inserting one of those Schembeck dance bills.

Judging by appearances, that potato booze must be powerful stuff.

Comparatively inexpensive, too.

They say the stuff made from the early Ohio has the strongest wallop, but the Red River booze has the best color.

Take our advice and stick to dandelion wine unless you want to take the count.

The city's street sprinkler was in operation exactly one-half hour during the dustiest week of the year.

We feel the same way about it.

Oakland, Cal., man paid $26 telephone charges to propose to a girl in Hannibal, Mo. He was accepted.

Wonder if they can hold a man to that kind of a proposal?
