HIGH COURT SAYS EXPULSION LEGAL

Alfred D. Smith of Box Butte Sued for Damages But Gets Nothing Except Hot Roast

Alfred D. Smith, twelve-year-old boy who sued members of the school board of district No. 30, Box Butte county and two or three school patrons, for $2,500 damages because he was expelled from school, gets just what he got in the district court—nothing except a hot roast. The supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court which was in favor of the defendants.

The suit was filed in the name of Miss Charlotte C. Worley, legal guardian of the Smith boy. Theodore Johnson and thers were defendants. The testimony showed that the teacher of the school, Miss Uhrig, desired to resign because she was having trouble with Alfred Smith and his brother, Earl. The school board invited patrons to attend a meeting for discussion of a proposal to expel Alfred. At this meeting the patrons, with the exception of one relative of the boy, voted for expulsion. The board later held a meeting and decided to expel the youth. No record was kept of this meeting and its legality was questioned. The court holds the expulsion legal.

The boy was charged with using vile and profane language, and writing obscene notes to young girls in the school. His attorney alleged the expulsion deprived the boy of his constitutional rights, that of free instruction in the common school. On that subject Judge J. R. Dean, who wrote the opinion of the supreme court, said:

"It will not be seriously contended that the fundamental law contemplates the attendance at a public school of any pupil who by reason of contumacious conduct will not avail himself of the opportunity of free instruction there offered to the youth of the state. If plaintiff's schoolmates told the truth, and evidently the jury believed them, his conduct was such that his attendance and his presence among them was not only a hindrance to their advancement but was as well a positive menace to the morals and to the safety of pupils who attended the school to avail themselves of the instruction that is guaranteed by the constitution."

NEW R. R. YARDS FOR BRIDGEPORT

Work has begun on the extensive switch tracks that are a part of the Burlington's plan for enlargement of the yards at Bridgeport, and the dirt is moving at as lively a rate as is possible with the use of teams of horses, says the Bayard Farmers Exchange. The horse power will be used for only a short time, it being necessary to grade the first track with teams so that rails can be laid for a steam shovel. As soon as the steam shovel can be put in operation the soil can be moved faster and cheaper.

The plans for ultimate construction of trackage in the Bridgeport yards call for fifteen switch tracks about a mile and a half long each. The work will be done in installments, the first installment being three tracks for the full length of the new yards. The contract for these tracks is being performed by Cunningham & Monahan of Denver, under the direction of Engineer E. F. Hamilton, of the Burlington, whose headquarters are at Alliance. Mr. Hamilton has been in Bridgeport this week looking after the work that is being started.

The camp of the contractors is located about a mile east of the round house, and the first grading is being done near the camp. The east end of the new yards will be about a mile and a half east of the round house, with the west end at the round house. The yard will be what is called a "flat" yard, instead of a "hump" yard, the latter designation meaning a yard that has a raised place, or "hump" at one end, so arranged that cars can be pushed over the "hump" and will then roll by gravity to the other end of the yard. It is claimed that "hump" yards are being found unsatisfactory in general operation, and are being taken out at places and being replaced by "flat" yards.

About 30,000 yards of earth will be moved by Cunningham & Monahan in this initial contract. That this signifies largely increased railroad activities at Bridgeport cannot be doubted.

Discreet and economical heads of families will now begin to rave about the beauty and charm of the women in bungalow aprons.
