9:30 A. M.—Leisurely arises from the billowy cloud on which he has slept and tries out his new wings. Has breakfast of chicken, ice cream and strawberry shortcake served by a dainty angel of the opposite sex. Chuckles with glee as he notices that his loose flowing robe has no buttons.
10 A. M.—Is assigned his ex-lieutenant for a dog-robber.
10:15 A. M.—Is put in charge of a fatigue squad composed of his former sergeants. Sits on the top step and encourages them with abuse as they police the Golden Stairs.

11 A. M.—Learns to play the latest jazz music on his new harp.
11:30 A. M.—Witnesses Saint Peter's refusal to admit his old top kick and ebrites with delight.
11:35 A. M.—Slings the bull with Ananias who finally admits himself beaten.

12 M.—Gleefully watches his old mess sergeant doing K. P. in the Heavenly Cook Shack.
12:15 P. M.—Is served a dainty lunca by his striker, who is forced to atone for his past misdeeds by eating canned willie and hardtack.
12:45 P. M.—Swaps army warns with George Washington, Napoleon and David. David discloses that cooties were not wholly unknown in his day.
1:30 P. M.—Draws a new crown from his old supply sergeant.

What do the burglars do with the fancy silk shirts they steal? No self-respecting burglar would wear the things.
