COX-ROOSEVELT CLUB

The American Bar association, meeting at St. Louis the other day, had this to say on the subject of the League of Nations. We quote from the report of the committee on resolutions:

"It is particularly fitting that the United States should support the proposal for this league. The League is based upon our own experience in a federation of states enjoying liberty and peace. It has seen our high destiny to join with the allies in preventing the destruction of liberty and establishing it as the governing principle in the life of the state.

"Upon entering the war we expressed it as our desire and purpose to secure not only for ourselves, but for all the nations of the world, an enduring peace, based upon those principles of liberty and of justice which we enjoy. The league is organized for that purpose. Should the United States refuse to enter the league it would defeat its organization; should the United States join, it gives the best assurance of its success."

There has been all sorts of discussion, pro and con, as to where the opposing candidates for the presidency stand on the labor question. The following, taken from one of Governor Cox's speeches during the present tour, will pretty effectually settle the question as regards the democratic nominee:

"Big business is always with reaction. That must be more than a coincidence. Why do they object to a progressive administration at Washington during the coming four years? Because they know perfectly well that if the progressive candidate for president is elected, and there is only one running, they will not have a reserved seat when we begin business at Washington.

"I was not nominated by any senatorial ring or any other kind of a ring, and I will not be tied down to my front porch by any senatorial ring or any other kind of a ring. The only front porch I am interested in this campaign is your front porch and I mean to carry the issues to you there.

"I have made some charges in this campaign. I have charged that an attempt is being made to purchase the presidency of the United States, and regardless of denials (I did not expect them to do anything else except deny), I repeat the charge in this presence, and I will continue to press that charge until the 2nd day of November, 1920. One would have thought that the Newberry episode in Michigan would have had its restraining influence on subsequent events, but the resolves of certain interests to take over the affairs of our government, amount apparently to a mania.

"I have been governor of Ohio six years, three terms, and I have never thrown the uniform of a soldier into the perspective nor the sky-line of an industrial controversy. And we have never fired a shot in Ohio for the purpose of settling an industrial strike. We kept the bayonet covered up. We never used it. We used in place the Golden Rule. It worked perfectly. That explains the large contributions of some of the big interests opposed to a progressive administration of affairs at Washington.

"Labor should have the right to organize, and, through representatives of their own choosing negotiate collective bargaining. This right has never been denied capital. Care must be exercised that government at no time be made oppressive in maintaining the laws of the land. I have said that public opinion will settle industrial disputes, and to this end believe that government should provide for proper investigation in all cases, with provision for the filing of the facts without prejudice, so that the public may have full information. The right to free speech and free press, and the right of orderly assembly, guaranteed by the constitution, must never be infringed.

"This generation must not profit at the expense of the next. National child labor laws must conserve the child life and welfare. Labor is vitally interested in the plan of readjustment which will be adopted. There are those who think the answer to present difficulties lies in the adoption of plans of the past; that progress has gone too far. I am not of that class. I think that the solution is in the dawn of a new day when the human soul and the human shall count for more than the sordid dollar. We must approach the tasks of tomorrow with open mind and with thought only for the benefit to humanity and to all people.

"Waste and extravagance must continue until as a result of our agreement with other nations, building of armaments may be discontinued. Our war taxes cannot be reduced if we must go on building battleships and equipping armies year after year in competition with other nations and we cannot discontinue until the other nations do likewise. The league of nations provides the means."
