The world has a lot of fellows who are decidedly fresh. They may be gifted, may even be respected for their talent, but they are just plain, ordinary fresh. You expect to find a certain number of fools in your travels, but you are filled with pity when you run across the fellow who would be perfectly good if he weren't so fresh. Colleges have their share of these "just watch me" artists. And the students usually have a way of relieving the freshness when it gets unbearable. Many a lad who thought he was the paragon of wisdom is saner and soberer after a midnight visit to the graveyard and other places where he has sung songs confessing his boobiness and done various stunts well conceived to relieve mental inflation. There seems to be no other way of making the fresh reasonable.—Ex.

"Put the loafers to work," exclaims the Atlantic Journal. Nothing doing. The energy that might be expended in that hopeless undertaking could accomplish much in productive industry. The loafer is a loafer and a good-for-nothing scamp at every stage of the game.

A union plumber testified in court that his employer quoted the Bible to him in an attempt to show him that it would be wrong for him to strike. The employer represented, maybe, that the flood started from the waste pipe in the kitchen sink.

It is said that the French bet 600,000,000 francs on horse races last year and will bet 1,000,000,000 this year. Somebody ought to give France a good talking to. The nations ought to stop that kind of foolery until they get out of the hole.

The naval governor of Guam, who prohibited whistling under penalty of a fine, has been relieved, but it is stated the whistling order had no bearing on this action. If it had not, it ought to have had, as such orders border on arbitrary government.

It is claimed for monkey glands that they correct criminal tendencies in the young and restore youth to the aged. Looking at monkeys in the casual way, one would never think their glands held such beneficent and beautiful possibilities.

A St. Louis man says there is too much meat that is bad. We don't believe it. There may be bad meat, but we know there is no such thing as too much meat. There are merely too many carrots.

And maybe you have also noticed that after a tennis girl gets married she takes about as much interest in her racquet as her husband does in his mandolin.

Mr. Peavish says that, although he is opposed to votes for women, if they all dress like Mrs. Peavish there is no danger of a petticoat government in this country.—Dallas News.

You Can't Afford

To Freeze Your Stock to Death by Poor Sheltering!

LET US HELP YOU DO YOUR BUILDING!

No. 650

COME IN AND SEE US ANY TIME.

Men who handle stock are finding that they cannot afford to freeze them to death. The terrible lesson of last spring, when many farmers and ranchmen lost enough stock to pay for all the sheds they would need in a life time, has convinced stock growers that there is no money in taking chances on such a loss again.

Please Come in and Let Us Show You How Surprisingly Cheap Cattle Sheds Can be Built.

Lumber to build sheds is cheaper in the end than feed, to say nothing of the chances of heavy loss. Sheltered stock require less feed, keep in better condition and make more money for the owner. The saving of labor adds to the profit of stock raising.

Come in and Let us Show you about building Sheds!
