AT THE CHURCHES

BAPTIST CHURCH

The services Sunday resulted in four more additions, making forty-six since our coming. Several more are considering the higher life.

The Sunday school was not quite as large as usual owing to several being confined to bed, but none are serious at this writing.

Our prayer meetings continue to be our best services, both in interest and results. However, we have not reached the seventy-five yet. Let us try a wee bit harder and we will.

The pastor had the pleasure of addressing one of the labor unions Monday and he never had a more attentive and intelligent audience. He found these men of toil well posted and very loyal to their principle. He felt especially at home as he stood before that fine body of men, it reminded him of the time when as an organizer he worked among the miners of Missouri. He was impressed by the earnestness of these men, and a spirit to win could be felt among them. He hopes to speak to other unions in the near future and on April 3rd the pastor will speak on "Christ and the Laboring Man," with railroad men as special guests. We are told they will march to the church in a body. Special music will be prepared for the occasion.

Services Sunday will be as follows: Morning—Baptism, infant and otherwise, an answer to Dean Dixon's plea for infant baptism.

Evening—A special lecture, founded on the play of that name, "Earthbound, or the Drama of Life." A large crowd is anticipated. Baptism will follow the lecture. Special music at all services. Come to the church where facts not fancies bring results. B. J. MINORT.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

"Wanted—Modern Isaiahs," is the evangelistic subject for the Lord's day morning sermon. At the evening service the minister will use the chart illustrating the subject: "Hell's Disappointment." These sermons will be scriptural and will point out the way more clearly to all. The preaching of the word is commanded of God and the Lord's Supper is ordained of Him to be observed on the "First day of the week." As a Christian you will be present at all of these services.

The Bible school and Christian Endeavor meetings will welcome you every Sunday and will find a place for all ages, both children and adults. The mid-week meeting of the church on Wednesday evening is well attended and the interest is good. There are additions to the church at this service as well as on the Lord's day. A place for everyone to work and every member a worker is our aim. The pre-Easter campaign is resulting in many additions. Are you having part in this fellowship? Get right in and go to work and enjoy the results of service. Come to the church with a message and a welcome.

STEPHEN J. EPLER, Minister.

METHODIST CHURCH.

The revival has gone forward with a good interest this week. It will continue till Easter, March 27. Saturday night the Junior Chorus will sing and lead the entire singing.

Sunday night the Junior chorus will appear in their special platform. The public will be glad to know that the boy soloist, Joe Holland, will sing both Saturday and Sunday night.

Next week, being Holy Week, is the most sacred period of the entire year. It commemorates the last week of the life of our Lord, including the crucifixion, death and resurrection. All people ought to observe this is a special way. You can do it in no better way than by attending our revival services, if your religious duties do not call you elsewhere.

It will be of special interest to Alliance and vicinity to know this Bishop Homer C. Stuntz, world traveler, lecturer, and bishop of two states, having about 1,200 churches under his care, will be with us April 3 for both the morning and evening service. We will have more to say about this later. M. C. SMITH, Pastor.

LUTHERAN CHURCH

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Lutheran church has German service. Sunday school after the service. F. DROEGEMUELLER, Pastor.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Palm Sunday will be observed in all the services. Morning worship at 11 a. m., "Making Christ King." Special music. Evening service, 7:30 p. m. This will be an entire evening of music both of anthems appropriate to the theme of the day, and old favorite hymns. Service in charge of the choir. Come and enjoy this evening of song. All are cordially invited to attend these services.

MUST BE UNLIMITED

"You say this doctor has a large practice?"
"It's so large that when a patient has nothing the matter with him he tells him so."

THE APPLE COATS AND SUITS

One clothing merchant uses the apple as a trademark. He claims there wouldn't have been any clothing business if it hadn't ben for an apple.—Wampus.

The ghosts of the pioneers must have laughed to have seen Lieutenant Pearson start out in an airplane and return on a mule's back.—St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette.

Nowadays the country never knows whether congress is in session or not. The results are about the same in both cases.

"Man found dead of heart disease in his cellar." Must have found all his stock had been looted.

RANDOM SHOTS

Today's Best Story

The story is told of a constable in a neighboring town who went out to levy on the contents of a house. The inventory began at the attic and ended in the cellar. When the dining room was reached the tally of furniture ran thus: "One dining room table, oak; one side-board, oak; one set of chairs, oak; two bottles of whiskey, full." Then the word full was stricken out and replaced by "empty," and the inventory went on in a hand that straggled and lurched diagonally across the page and closed with: "One revolving door mat."

When Kansas Editors Spat

The esteemed Chanute Tribune, which is edited by a man so thin that he has to wear packing in his union suit to keep his ribs from rattling tries to clinch a shaly argument by personalities about the figure of the editor of the Emporia Gazette, contending that while it is a short distance as the crow flies from his ton to his toes, it is a long way around by the tropic of Capricorn, or something like that. The answer is simple: We are not the sort of a person who attracts the crows. Around us neither the crow flies nor the shoe flies nor the house flies—all of which are generally tempted by the emaciated candlestick that edits the Chanute Tribune. The moral is that a human crow bait shouldn't throw crows.—Emporia Gazette.

A Harvard man (relates Ole Buck) was in Omaha recently and saw a Chinaman fall off of a street car. He immediately yelled at the conductor: "Hey, mister, you've lost a washer off your car."

At last the humane bootlegger has been discovered. When Officer Stillwell arrested the last offender, he found a pint bottle of white mule and a small funnel on his person. The bootlegger didn't explain the existence of the funnel satisfactorily. The officers, remembering the story of the barroom that used to serve whisky-brooms with each drink of whisky, think that the patient was laid flat on his back and the whisky poured in through the funnel.

If this home distilled stuff gets any stronger, you may expect to see the bootleggers administering drinks with a hypodermic.

One Nebraska editor has discovered that the sting of a wasp is only .32 of an inch long. The other foot and a half, he says, is all imagination.

Swatting the Welfare Workers

Ole Buck: I know two Harvard grandmothers who raised fair sized families without ever hearing of such a thing as child welfare movements. Any welfare worker who might have been brave enough to tell them how to raise their kids would have been histed out of the kitchen with a broom. And they still think that is the proper way to serve such people.

Author unknown, but it sounds like Bill Maupin: In spite of all the welfare workers are doing to prevent it, most people manage to get a good deal of enjoyment out of life.

The editor of the esteemed State Journal has come to the conclusion that there are not three men in the lower branch of the state legislature who can be "reached" by improper means. The Journal company is trying to get a monopoly on the printing of the 1921 statutes, and this may be expert testimony. Or it may be that the scribe doesn't think the rest of them know enough to make change.

It seems to us that someone ought to make public the true explanation of what happened in room 334 of the Lincoln hotel at Scottsbluff the night George Carey occupied it. Those Lions stick together, and Carey is powerful non-committal.

Our reason for insisting on pitiless publicity, in this as in other matters, is that the dear public is so likely to think that the episode was much more startling than it really was. George ought to come across and clear up the mystery.

But he won't.

Of course, there's nothing wicked about it—it only looked that way.

Appearances, as the poet said, were against him.

It may be due to the fact that his mind was elsewhere, and it may not, but there is no question but something was wrong with George Milburn, over at Thiele's, yesterday. A friend gave him a 15-cent cigar. Four minutes later, while the friend was still there, Ben came in to buy one, and George calmly reached into his pocket and sold the 15-cent gift smoke for a thin dime.

Hereafter, when someone gives George a cigar, we hope they call us in plenty of time for us to get in on the cut prices.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

"Mister," whined the beggar, "will you give a poor man something for a drink?"

"You bet I will," said the pedestrian, brightening. "How much you got with you?"

A DOUBLE DANGER
